SPEAKERSHIP IN DEADLOCK

IMMUNITY BATH FOR NEW HAVEN

The Boston AMERICAN is able to publish exclusively today the plan of Howard Elliott, chairman of the New Haven Railroad, for the dissolution of the New England transportation monopoly. This plan has been submitted to Attorney-General McReynolds in Washington. It follows:

1. The New Haven will turn over the Boston & Maine to trustees to be operated for a term of years, when the stock is to be sold and pass into other hands.

2. The New Haven and the New York Central will dissolve their agreement for joint operation of the Boston & Albany.

3. The New Haven will agree to give up its trolley lines, which ramify practically all of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

4. The New Haven will retain its control and stock ownership in the New England Navigation Company.

TO DROP CRIMINAL SUITS.

The control of the steamship lines is the only question that stands today in the way of a full and immediate agreement whereby the government is to abandon its proposed prosecution of the combine under the Anti-Trust Law.

In any event, it has been settled that there is to be no criminal prosecution of any former officers or directors of the New Haven.

Chairman Elliott has staked all on his demand for acceptance of proposition No. 4.

The corporation is quite willing to give up the trolleys, as they were purchased on a speculative situation and have been operated at a loss. The divorcement of the Boston & Albany from the combine is not objectionable, as the road operating independently, it is said, would be in such poor financial shape and so handicapped by its payment infirmities that it would not be a factor in creating competition.

The separation of the Boston & Maine is said to be the only sacrifice the New Haven system really is making. This carries its sting as a choice between two evils and is the hope that it will present such a material concession to the early demands of the Department of Justice as to absolutely prevent any contemplated legal steps from being taken.

The Attorney-General in the earlier stages of the negotiations insisted that in any plan of reorganization the steamship lines should be restored to the Independent field of competition. The extremely friendly character of the conferences and harmony from of mind of Mr. Elliott as he emerged therefrom seemed to suggest that the Attorney-General is not as aggressive as he was.

MONOPOLY STILL EXISTS.

It is pointed out by those familiar with conditions in New England that the steamship lines are the crux of the whole question. Their importance to the New Haven is so vital that Chairman Elliott is ready to fight before yielding on this point.

If he retains those ship lines and loses every other railroad alliance in New England, it is asserted, the monopoly of the New Haven will still exist and every railroad in all that region will be compelled to pay it tribute.

The New England Steamship Navigation Company, the subsidiary of the New Haven, controls every ship engaged in coastwise traffic entering every port from Portland to New London and Bridgeport.

Colonel Was Ready to Shoot Civilians

STRASSBURG, Germany, Jan. 7.—The resistance of Colonel von Reuter of the 99th Alsatian Infantry Regiment in reply to the laughter of the citizens of Zaabern with a raking fire from his machine guns was demonstrated in the testimony given today before the court-martial sitting to try him and Lieutenant Schad, a junior officer of his regiment, on charges of illegal assumption of authority.

Privated Commissioner Mueller of Zabern swore that when the colonel was reminded that the civilians were merely standing about in the streets of the town, he responded:

"I intend to prevent this standing about, at any cost. I do not intend to let the people laugh in this way. In it continues I shall order the troops to shoot."

Democratic Women Make Vote an Issue

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 7.—A fiery fight over woman suffrage overtopped all other business when the Women's National Democratic League began its annual convention here today. The issue was raised by Mrs. Edward Keating, wife of the congressman-at-large from Colorado, at a preliminary meeting of the executive meeting.

The question is to be fought out in the meetings for the presidency between Mrs. William A. Gullop and the wife of Representative Gullop of Washington, who is expected to rally the suffrage forces.

Hayes Is Opposed to Adams as Judge

Forest N. Adams, named by Governor Foss as a trial justice of Middlesex county, is opposed for confirmation by Martin Hayes, representing Jacob Kennedy of Natick. John J. Akers, George C. Patterson, A. J. Bowen, Martin T. Hall and William H. Hassett, Judge Adams' colleagues of the Framingham Court and Lemon Sawyer of Taunton favor the appointment.

Death at Panama of E. P. Halloran

Word was received here today announcing the sudden death of E. P. Halloran, a well known hotel man, here at Empire, Panama. Mr. Halloran was in charge of the Hotel Tivoli, in the Canal Zone, which is run by the government for the accommodation of officers engaged in the canal work. He was unmarried, but leaves several relatives in Worcester and Brookline. The body will be brought to Boston for burial.

MISS CORA L. VAN NORDEN, former Salvation Army lassie in Boston, who has been left a million by her late father, Warner Van Norden of New York.

TESTIFY TO THAW'S SANITY

Mrs. Slater Sued by Cook

WAR CRY GIRL GETS MILLION

A romance Salvation Army "lassie" in this city has just been left $1,000,000.

This heiress is "Cora," who sold "War Crys" up and down the streets and cities in Boston, collected money with one of the Christmas boxes in front of the Jordan, Marsh Company's entrance and who wore the Army uniform—and the poke bonnet was quite becoming to her, too.

The will of Warner Van Norden, New York banker, showed today that the Boston Army "lassie" known as "Cora" was no other than Miss Cora Van Norden, daughter of the rich banker, petted society girl and a mighty practical worker in things charitable.

Mr. Van Norden was president of the Van Norden Trust Company. He has named his daughter or residuary legatee, which means a heritage of about $1,000,000.

"Cora" of the Army sold hundreds of "War Crys" and took many nickels, dimes and pennies in her Christmas collection box. Of course none of the buyers of the "War Crys" or contributors to the Christmas box suspected that the sweet-faced lassie in her blue and red uniform, was the prospective owner of a million dollars.

MAY HAVE BEEN FIXED.

It is not straining the imagination to think that "Cora," standing on cold days on the street with her collection box, was often pitied by fur-wrapped damsels of Boston's Back Bay, who little suspected that the Army "lassie" had rich, rare furs of her own that she wore when she was not engaged in her Army duties.

Nor did the habitues of the Bowdoin Square saloons, where "Cora" contemporaneously offered her "War Cry" for sale, dream that this girl's father was a powerful figure in the world of dollars.

Not even "Cora's" army associates knew, except Colonel Adam Clifford, the Boston commander, Mrs. Clifford and a few other executives.

"Miss Van Norden was one of our most active workers when she was with us four years ago," said Colonel Clifford today, "but very few people outside of Army circles knew of her presence in Boston. Although her father was thoroughly in sympathy with her endeavors.

"Miss Van Norden's principal work while in Boston consisted of collecting money for the poor. She was stationed on Washington street, in front of the Jordan, Marsh Company's entrance, with a Christmas kettle offering box. But she also sold 'War Crys,' visited the poor and did such other work as falls to the lot of a Salvation Army officer."

LIVED IN THE PALACE.

When Miss Van Norden, with her father's consent, came to Boston to take up Salvation Army work, she entered into it fully, even to living at the Salvation Army Palace at the corner of Washington and East Brookline streets.

She tramped the streets in all sorts of weathers, came in closest contact with the misery of poverty and sickness on her visits to the poor, exposed herself to saloon atmosphere in selling her Army papers and endured weather discomforts for hours at a time while guarding her Christmas box in the shopping district.

One thing about her work pleased her particularly, that she never was molested to any real objectionable remark when she entered saloons to sell the "War Cry." She was invariably treated with respect, even though men would occasionally tell her that she was a mighty good looking girl.

Finally Mr. Van Norden called his daughter, and Boston never knew, until today, that one of its Salvation "lassies" was a "millionheiress."

BAIL PLEA FAVORED BY MANY

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 7.—Testimony distinctly favorable to Harry Kendall Thaw and a sensational rebuke to William Travers Jerome, Thaw's Nemesis, smoothed the way for public hearings today before the special Thaw Sanity commission on Harry's petition for release on bail.

Through the testimony of Hook, sheriff Holman Dyer and Policeman Clark Stevens—the only two witnesses called and Harry's constant companions since his arrest nearly four months ago—Thaw won the first big asset in his fight for liberty. For it is thought Thaw would as a menace to the public if he were released under bonds, Sheriff Dyer replied from the witness chair:

"No."

To the same question Policeman Stevens replied:

"No, indeed. I do not consider Harry a menace in any sense."

REPORT FOR JEROME.

Even more important today was the reply of the commission to a letter from Jerome, who failed to put in an appearance. Jerome in his letter, which was termed "distasteful" by lawyer-spectators, explained his absence as due to the "limited scope of the commission's inquiry."

From his chair General Pearson, director, chairman of the commission, at the outset of the hearing announced the commission's view of Jerome's letter. He said:

"It seems obvious that Mr. Jerome greatly misapprehends the court's order and the scope of the commission's powers and duties thereunder."

The entire commission took official action on the receipt of Jerome's letter by sending him a telegram of which the New York lawyer was told that "material facts and not hearsay" were wanted.

In its telegraphic response Jerome the commission reiterates this idea, saying that "mere opinion" is plain facts cannot be received as a basis for our conclusions."

"CALLING HIS BLUFF."

The commission told Jerome today it would hear him next Friday if he has any "facts" he desires to lay before the board.

Jerome's letter and the commission's action in regard to it caused a sensation. One of the number of attorneys in the courtroom aimed in lookers-on said tersely:

"They're calling his bluff, all right."

This Jerome episode overshadowed the actual testimony today. The point at issue was whether or not the commission has the power to determine Thaw's present mental condition.

Jerome, in his letter, claimed the commission does not have this power.

The commission, however, as made known through the announcement of General Streeter, claims it has the power under the orders of Judge Edgar Aldrich of the Federal Court, who appointed the board.

Harlow Confirmed for Harbor Board

George M. Harlow, one of Governor Foss' secretaries, was today confirmed as a member of the Harbor and Land Commission by the Governor's Council. The council yesterday deadlocked over confirming Harlow's appointment, the vote being 4 for confirming the appointment and 4 for refusing to confirm.

A suit for $100 brought by Mary O'Connor, a cook, against Mrs. Mabel Hunter Slater, millionairess and owner of the famous Slater mills at Webster, who with her could appeared in court attired in a fashionable gown and furs, proved the center of interest at the courtroom today.

Following the testimony when Judge Parmenter took the case under advisement, Mrs. Slater said to a reporter for the Boston AMERICAN:

"I feel that in this case, precedent had to be established. I believed that other women should be saved the trouble and expense that similar suits entail.

SAYS SHE WAS HIRED.

Miss O'Connor testified that she had been hired by Mrs. Slater's maid at a cook at $60 a month. She said that she has been given fifty cents with which to go home, where she was to wait until she was sent for.

She testified that she spent two letters as described other portions.

Mrs. Slater then took the stand.

"I employ Miss Tranteau as my maid. She interviews all applicants for positions and hires her apple cook. I have never given her authority to hire any one. I told Miss O'Connor that I did not care to hire or the day she came under when the letters came from her. I assigned to them and was shown in those letters in the wastebasket as I saw that they were rather sensational. And my maid (Miss Tranteau) said she would attend to them.

TAKE THEM ON TRIAL.

"I always use my servants before taking them. I take them on trial for a day or two and sometimes for a week to see if they suit and to prove they like their duties.

Mrs. Slater's maid with a French accent which drew the attention of the court room, testified that she did not engage servants for Mrs. Slater.

"I told her that Mrs. Slater is fussy or difficult, I mean by that, is the word, as I speak very bad English," she testified.

Mrs. Whitney Plans Titanic Memorial

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Plans for a Titanic memorial, submitted by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney of New York, to be placed in Washington, have been accepted by the Fine Arts Commission. The monument will commemorate the heroism of the men who sacrificed their lives that women passengers might be saved.

The figures, in white marble, stands with arms outstretched and head thrown back, and gives the impression from a distance of a frieze.

"UNCLE JOE" BETTER

"I'm Not Going to Die"

TELL EVERYBODY

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—"I'm not going to die while I can see anybody else living."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon's voice came clear and strong over the telephone from Danville this morning, when asked if he was ill.

"You can see how sick I am by my voice," he said. "It's just a little cold and its clearing up and I'm going to feel first rate in a few days. My only worry is the fear that exaggerated reports that I am sick reach my family, who are in India on their way around the world."

CUSHING DEFEAT PROBABLE

The first ballot was as follows:
Total votes 237
Necessary to a choice 119
Cushing 117
Pagan 117
Wallace 1
Morrill 1

Every candidate voted for himself, taking no chances. The deadlock was not a surprise, but the Democrats expected that the Democratic bolt for Pagan for mine or ten ballots, before making the break that Tawse jumped up and announced that he changed his vote to Webster. This was the signal for the stampede to Webster, after which Democratic nine Democrats, one by one, began changing their votes to Webster.

Only one vote was changed from Democratic column to Republican, Webster receiving 129 votes, but four ballots ..... votes. This made the second ballot on what really was the first ballot under the changed ..... as follows:

Cushing 117
Wallace 4
Webster 116
Morrill 1
Wallace and Morrill ..... votes to the secretary.

Members stood ..... Democrats were sworn in by Governor Foss, who was attended by the Executive Council. In the organization was started by the election of Calvin Coolidge as president. He received 31 votes to 6 for Francis J. Hurley, 5 for Benjamin Dockham and 1 for Charles M. Cox of Melrose, Progressive.

After election Governor Cushing delivered his address to the Senate. It bristled with epigrammatic sentences, for instance:

"Expect to be called a standpatter, but don't be a standpatter.

"The suspension of one man's dividends is the suspension of another man's pay envelope.

"Don't hesitate to be as revolutionary as Aristotle, don't hesitate to be as reactionary as the multiplication table."

SEARCH BOOKS OF REVERE FOR FRAUD IN TAXES

The accounts of the town of Revere came under the official eye of the District Attorney's office again today when inspectors Miles Waite and Ronan Walsworth, attorney for the Revere citizens investigating committee began an examination of the books in the tax collecting department.

This investigation grows out of the case which resulted a few months ago in the conviction of Samuel A. Rogers, then chairman of assessors, on a charge of altering book records with intent to defraud. Rogers' appeal on exceptions is pending before the Supreme Judicial Court.

Atty. Goodwin, chairman of the investigating committee, is quoted as saying that the town has been robbed.

The committee claims that there are records of abatements of taxes where no abatement was made. The committee asks: "If the tax papers paid their full tax, but only an abatement shows on the books, what became of the money?"

Mr. Walsworth was asked today about Mr. Goodwin's statement that Revere has lost $68,000. He said that amount might be discovered, but was not actually shown so far. No complaint is made against the present administration of the collectorship.

How to Make Idle Houses Earn Money

The answer is easy. Find a tenant. But there's quite a difference between treating the matter as a joke and signing a lease with the responsible head of a family.

Here's the solution of the problem. Tell the hundreds of thousands who read the American each day what you have in a cleverly worded "Houses to Let" talk to be run in the "Want Ad" columns of the American.

TRY TO KILL BIRRELL, HOME RULE CHAMPION

DUBLIN, Jan. 7.—The police today began investigating what was an evident attempt to assassinate Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, last night. A bullet was fired through the window of Mr. Birrell's office in Dublin Castle. He was out of the room at the time. A sentry at the castle said he heard no report, which led the police to believe that the bullet had been fired either from an air gun or from a weapon with a Maxim silencer attached.

Two theories were suggested:

One that the shot was fired as a protest against the government investigation of the Dublin riots; the other that it was fired by a sympathizer of the suffragettes.

Increase in Wage Earners.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 7.—An increase of 2,685 in the number of wage-earners employed in this State, over last year, was reported by Factory Inspector Ellery J. Hudson.

PASTOR BLAMED FOR DIVORCE BY MRS. SHIELDS

Mrs. Harriet Shields, a well known Boston church organist, today declared that her husband, the Rev. A. O. Shields, had been won away from his family by the study of the healing of disease by the mind, which he had begun in Boston as a member of the Emmanuel movement. She declared that she had never deserted him. Shields secured a divorce from his wife in California yesterday on the ground that she had deserted him. Mrs. Shields declared that she had simply refused to have her home turned into a hospital for curing disease by mental treatment.

Shields has been living for the past four years in Pasadena, California, practicing psychotherapy.

Mr. Shields has been deposed from the ministry of the Episcopal Church and he no longer connected with that denomination. He was formerly rector of the church of the Redeemer (Episcopal), South Boston.

"I did not desert my husband," said Mrs. Shields today at her residence in Dorchester. "When my case is thoroughly understood every one will see how unfair has been my treatment.

"I went twice to my husband when he left Boston for Pasadena. He was very much taken up with psychotherapeutic methods and I felt that I could not sacrifice my family for this. I pleaded with him not to take up these methods and break up the home life. After seeing conditions in Pasadena I felt that my first duty was to my family. So I left and came East.

HOME A HOSPITAL.

"Mr. Shields was persistent about psychotherapy. With my family, I already had too much of this in South Boston. For five months or more our house there was turned over to patients, much to my discomfort and that of my family.

"I knew that the same conditions would prevail in California. If Mr. Shields would only have come East and stayed with his family, there would have been no further trouble. I would not drag down my family to the demands of psychotherapy.

"There was no desertion about the matter. I remained here with my family. It was my duty, not my privilege, to do so until they were able to do for themselves.

"If Mr. Shields had his way he would have thrown part of the family out into the cold and made them shift for themselves. Now, I have done what any wife would have done under such circumstances. Shields was simply carried away, unreasonably, with this method, which he gathered from some training in Emmanuel Church under the direction of Rev. Dr. McComb.

"There is no desertion at all. I stayed by my family and would not allow them to shift for themselves. Home life is worth everything.

PROTECTED FAMILY.

"All this trouble would have been avoided but the ungovernable temper of Mr. Shields yielded more to the psychotherapeutic methods he was taking up to promote. It is this freakiness that I could not tolerate.

"While I enjoy music, I was not lured away to Boston because of it. It is an unfair to say this of me."

Mr. Shields adopted the Emmanuel movement in his parish, the Church of the Redeemer, South Boston, which finally resulted in his resigning from that field. He was formerly a Baptist minister and was born in Nova Scotia.

Six Hundred at Rosetta Club Ball

Columbia Hall at Pleasant and Pearl streets, Dorchester, was the scene of the first ball of the Rosetta Club last night, 600 people attending. The hall was decorated with bunting and potted plants. The entertainment was greatly enjoyed. The club is composed of eight employes of the Forbes Brothers Silk Store on Temple place. Mrs. A. H. Thresher and Mrs. C. H. HOTLY DENIES HE DESERTED DROWNING MEN

While the federal inspectors of steam vessels were beginning in Boston an investigation into the wreck of the Oklahoma off Sandy Hook, in which twenty-five men lost their lives, dispatches from New York brought a denial of Captain Hunter's charge that the Spanish steamer Manuel Calvo "taunted" the marooned men on the Oklahoma's hulk with hopes of rescue and then failed to give any help.

The denial came from Captain Juan Bonet of the Manuel Calvo. He said: "It is a lie. I risked my ship to save those men. When we came upon the Oklahoma there was only one smooth patch of water, caused by oil coming from the wreckage. I launched a boat containing seven men and they headed through the oil patch for the wreck.

"The seas were too high, however. Four of the oars were swept away and the lifeboat began to fill with water. The boat was helpless and four of the men were hurt. At great risk, for one of the Manuel Calvo's rudder chains had snapped, I turned my ship toward the rising tanker.

"Finally we rescued our own men. I could not risk us breeches buoy. It was impossible in those seas. We stayed by the wreck, sending out continuous 'S. O. S.' calls until the Navarra and the Tenadores came up. I did everything I could."

2 MORE SHIPS FOR NEW CANAL BOSTON LINE

Announcement was made today that the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company is building two new vessels for the Boston and Panama Canal service at Sparrows' Point, Maryland. The steamship company is already in operation between Atlantic and Pacific ports, including Boston. The company's cargo is being transferred by rail between Salina Cruz and Porto Mexico.

The second ship of the company (Minnesotian) arrived here today and docked at the New Haven docks, South Boston. She brought 1,500 tons of cargo for Boston, 1,400 for Philadelphia and 2,700 for New York. As the Minnesotian steamed through Nantucket Sound yesterday she received a wireless call for help from the Nantucket Shoals' Lightship, where J. A. Johnson, chief engineer, was put aboard, brought to Boston and later hurried to the Marine Hospital for treatment for a bruised hand which he received last Sunday night aboard the lightship.

CASTOR OIL IS A DIFFERENT THING, NOW

That Is, the Taste and Odor Have Been Removed

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil Is the Best Laxative in 3000 Years

Spencer Kellogg & Sons of Buffalo, oil refiners, have succeeded in taking the offensive taste and smell out of castor oil.

The Kelloggs have done what chemists have tried to do and failed for 3,000 years.

Doctors recommend castor oil as the simplest, safest and best laxative. Every household will use it oftener, now that it is tasteless.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is pure, clear, refined castor oil, and so entirely without taste that children take it easily.

This perfect laxative is now on sale in all drug stores. Order Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil by name, to distinguish it from various mixed and flavored castor oils, which are not tasteless. The trade mark is on every label—the green castor leaf bearing the signature —Kellogg's. 25c and 50c sizes.

Conditions—Boston American Picture Answer Contest

The Boston American, new 1914 Picture Answer Contest is a contest of skill and judgment, open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

One hundred and fifty-two cash prizes will be given, absolutely free, by the Boston American to the winners.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

The contest will consist of seventy-five puzzle pictures, to be printed one each day, consecutively, in the daily and Sunday American, first picture Sunday, January 4th.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, will not debar any one from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two, three, four or five SETS of answers, but each SET must contain one ANSWER to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded in any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written, or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American, or on a page of some book form by itself, numbered either by the puzzle picture furnished by the Boston American or a pen or pencil number, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

Do NOT send your solution in "list" form, i. e., do not write answers under another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should contestants send in their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day, and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered to the Boston American Contest Headquarters, at No. 8 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is impossible to give contestants ten extra days in two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, as that they can be sent in all together, at one time.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Picture Answer Contest Editor, No. 8 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

As all answers will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rate, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse any sets of answers on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no answer book to buy. A list of several hundred names of titles will be printed in the Sunday American each week during the life of the contest. This list, appearing each Sunday, will contain many others the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week beginning with each succeeding Sunday.

Contestants who desire further information should address their inquiries to "Picture Answer Contest Editor, No. 8 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass." Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for a reply, or call at their store (Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly conducting the popularity contest, and the decision of the Boston American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a contestant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

The Contest Plan

Each day for 75 days, commencing Sunday, Jan. 4th, the Boston American will print a picture representing the name or title of a song, book, poem, explorer, play, proverb, river or lake, or other appropriate subject.

$4,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to the 155 competitors who send in the largest number of correct answers.

There will be no catalogue or book of titles to buy. The American will furnish this information absolutely free to contestants by publishing each week in the Sunday American an official list of names or titles, among which will be found the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week commencing with each such Sunday publication.

Glance down the prize list and get busy right now—today, for the big $1,000 cash prize.

OUST QUINCY STREET AND POLICE HEADS

Mayor John L. Miller of Quincy announced today that he had sent letters to Chief of Police Frank E. Harrell and Superintendent of Streets Michael E. Shea, requesting that the gentlemen "tender their resignations for the good of the service, to take effect February 1."

In explaining his action, Mayor Miller said, "Our police department has been conducted in an unsystematic and inefficient manner. It is one of the most loosely managed and unsatisfactory departments in the city, due to the methods of the head of the department."

Chief Burrell has been in the department for nine years, and is at present under civil service rules. Should he refuse to tender his resignation as requested, he could demand a hearing and could not be removed unless charges were preferred against him.

Michael E. Shea, superintendent of streets, is a brother of the late William T. Shea, ex-mayor of Quincy.

Wilson Still Wants Hill as Comptroller

PASS CHRISTIAN, Miss., Jan. 7.—Although no word has come direct from President Wilson, it was reported today that the President has not decided not to appoint John Skelton Williams comptroller of the currency. For more than a fortnight Mr. Williams' appointment has been regarded as a certainty. While Senator J. Hill, the railroad magnate, has declared that he could not serve upon the Federal Reserve Board, indications are that President Wilson is still considering him. A score or more candidates, being vigorously backed by powerful friends, include Paul Warburg, a New York banker, and George M. Reynolds of Chicago.

MISS CAROL A. HARRIMAN, daughter of the late railroad magnate, who has sailed for Europe to study vocal music in Paris.

PATROLMAN IN UNEQUAL FIGHT GETS ONE MAN

Patrolman Edward F. Brennan of the Lagrange street police station today was a mass of bruises as a result of having to battle for his life last night with Charles J. Rice and an unidentified companion. He held onto Rice only after firing three shots in a rough and tumble fight with both men, in which the other man escaped.

Rice has a police record. In 1911 he sawed his way to freedom while being taken in the police van to the Deer Island boat to serve out a five months' sentence for obtaining money under false pretences. Captured later he was given from five to seven years in the State Prison.

Patrolman Brennan held up both men last night as they emerged from the auto supply shop of Brophy & Larrabee, No. 46 Columbus avenue. They took auto tires and started to run when they saw the officer. He fired three shots after the men.

Rice threw up his hands. The moment he was placed under arrest, however, he tripped Patrolman Brennan into the gutter, and proceeded to kick him about the body. But Brennan finally subdued him.

Rice's unidentified companion had continued down the street with the auto tires in his possession. The first intimation that Patrolman Brennan had of anything different was when he received a terrific blow behind the ear, which knocked him down. It was a desperate battle, two men against one.

Brennan's revolver had been lost in the struggle, and he was badly used up, but he managed to grip Rice and use him as a shield from his companion's attack. With the blood streaming down his face and half-conscious, he succeeded in drawing his nightstick. He brought Rice to his feet and got the other man to flight.

Mrs. Mackay Leaves Portland for Good

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, who has given up the lease of a house here, will not return, it was announced today.

Mme. Aguglia Wins Applause in 'Elettra'

Hofmannsthal's tragedy, "Elektra," was performed for the first time in Boston last evening by Mme. Mimi Aguglia, the Italian tragedienne, and her company at the Hub Theatre. Mme. Aguglia's impersonation was warmly applauded. With her accustomed native intensity she carried a full audience of admirers with her.

The company gave efficient support. Mme. Zoppetti was Chrysothemis, Mme. Angeloni was Clytemnistre and Mr. Sterni was Orestes.

The evening began with a farce in one act performed with marked ability by minor members of the company.

"To play this evening will be Sardou's "Fedora."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, often backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches and sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Go Armed Against Stomach Trouble

A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Carried in Your Purse or Vest Pocket Will Enable You to Always Keep Your Stomach in Line

Many of all sorts of stomach troubles is due to the fact that the digestive machinery and nothing make this a constant torture and an obstacle to success. The man who is going to succeed today must have his stomach as well as his mind and muscles under control. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a necessity to the man who would always have his body in subjection to his will.

"I Eat When I Will, What I Want, Because After Each Meal I Take a Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets famish just those elements—pepsin and other ingredients—that the normal stomach secretes for the digestion of food. One or two of these tablets will completely digest the heartiest meal without any aid from the stomach. At the same time they tone up the stomach, so that enfeebled stomach or that it is soon in a healthy condition again.

Prudent men always have a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on hand. They make digestion certain no matter what or how much is eaten. Don't think because your stomach is usually all right that you don't need them. The man who carries a receiver on hearing for sends it at the time, when and where he does need it, he needs it right then. When you want relief from indigestion, you want relief at once. Be afraid under stomach troubles with a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets 50 cents at any drug store. Successful men everywhere endorse them and rely upon them.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

If You Did Not See Opening Instalments Read This First

MARY O'NEILL begins her story by telling of how her father, born in Ellan, the son of peasants, had gone to America, become rich and had then returned to his birthplace, where he married the daughter of Captain O'Neill of the O'Neills, and had changed his name from Daniel Nash to Daniel O'Neill. She tells of her own birth and of her mother's disappointment for it is to be born he might have been Lord Ean, by right of his mother.

She tells of Father Dan, the priest, and of her mother, an invalid from her earliest memory, and of her Aunt Bridget, who came to make home for Daniel O'Neill and brought with her her daughter and her stepdaughter. Her aunt soon came to run the house and to domineer over Mary and her mother and to make them both very unhappy. Quarrels, in which Mary's father always took the side of her aunt, were many, and all of one of them he declared that the children must all go to school.

One Christmas eve she hears the "waits" and conceives the idea of singing the waits herself. In her impatience she forgets to put on either hat or cloak and steals out with nothing on but a pair of thin slippers and a velvet frock that leaves her neck and arms bare. She is taken into the home of Doctor Conrad and is kept there all night. In the morning she makes the acquaintance of the doctor's son, a boy named Martin, whose greatest delight is to play he is an explorer.

She is sent to school, where the teacher is a creature of her aunt's. One day the teacher catches her whispering and is about to whip her, when she is saved by Martin Conrad.

One day Mary and Martin go "exploring" in a boat and land on a rock. Their boat floats away and late at night they are found, fast asleep in each other's arms. It is decided, against her mother's protests, to send Mary to a convent in Rome.

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL
FIRST PART
MY GIRLHOOD

Eleventh Chapter

MY mother's submission was complete. Within twenty-four hours she was busy preparing clothes for my journey to Rome. The old colored nurse, Dosia, was brought out again, material was sent for, a sewing maid was engaged from the village, and above all, in my view, an order was dispatched to Blackwater for a small squirrel-skin scarf, a large squirrel-skin muff, and a close-fitting squirrel-skin hat with a feather on the side of it.

A child's heart is a running brook, and it would wrong the truth to say that I grieved much in the midst of these busy preparations. On the contrary I felt a sort of pride in them, poor innocent that I was, as in something that gave me a certain high superiority over Betsy Beauty and Nessy MacLeod, and entitled me to treat them with condescension.

Father Dan, who came more frequently than ever, fostered this feeling without intending to do so, by telling me, whenever we were alone, that I must be a good girl to everybody now, and especially to my mother.

"My little woman would be sorry to worry mamma, wouldn't she?" he would whisper, and when I answered that I would be sorrier than sorry, he would say:

"Wisha then, she must be brave. She must keep up. She must not grieve about going away or cry when the time comes for parting."

I said "yes" and "yes" to all this, feeling very confidential and courageous, but I dare say the good father gave the same counsel to my mother also, for she and I had many scenes of make-believe, I remember, in which we laughed and chattered and sang, though I do not think I ever suspected that the part we played was easier to me than to her.

It dawned on me at last, though, when in the middle of the night near to the time of my going away, I was awakened by a fit of my poor mother's coughing, and heard her say to herself in the deep breathing that followed:

"My poor child! What is to become of her?"

Nevertheless all went well down to the day of my departure. It had been arranged that I was to sail for Liverpool by the first of the two daily steamers, and without any awakening I leapt out of bed at the first sign of daylight. So great was my delight that I began to dance in my nightdress to an invisible skipping rope, forgetting my father, who also rose at dawn and was at breakfast in the room below.

A SAD GOODBY.

My mother and I breakfasted in bed, and then there was great commotion. It chiefly consisted of me in putting on my new clothes, running my furs and then turning round and round on tiptoe and smiling at myself in a mirror. I was doing this while my mother was telling me to be sure to be as often as I could to church, and while she knelt at her prayer-stool, which she used as a desk, to make a copy of the address for my letters.

Then I noticed that the first line of her superscription "Miss Mary O'Neill" was blurred by the tears that were dropping from her eyes, and my throat began to hurt me dreadfully. But I remembered what Father Dan had told me to do, so I said:

"Never mind, mamma. Don't worry —I'll be home for the holidays."

Soon afterwards we heard the carriage wheels passing under the window, and then Father Dan came up in a white knitted muffler, and with a funny long which he used for his surplice at funerals, and said through a little cloud of white breath, that everything was ready.

I saw that my mother was turning round taking out her pocket handkerchief, and I was snuffing at mine myself, but at a sign from Father Dan, who was standing at the threshold, I squeezed back the water in my eyes and cried:

"Good-bye, mammy. I'll be back for Christmas," and then darted across to the door.

I was just passing through it when I heard my mother say "Mary" in a strange low voice, and I turned and saw her—I can see her still—with her beautiful pale face all broken up, and her arms held out to me.

Then I rushed back to her, and she clasped me to her breast, crying, "My own! My Molly own!" and I could feel her heart beating through her dress and hear the husky rattle in her throat, and then all our poor little game of make-believe broke down utterly.

At the next moment my father was calling upstairs that I should be late for the steamer, so my mother dried her own eyes and then mine, and let me go.

Father Dan was gone when I reached the head of the stairs, but young Nessy MacLeod and Betsy Beauty at the bottom of them I soon recovered my composure, and sailing down in my finery I passed them in stately silence with my little bird-like head in the air.

MARY'S DEFIANCE.

I intended to do the same with Aunt Bridget, who was standing with a shawl over her shoulders by the open door, but she touched me and said:

"Aren't you going to kiss me good-bye, then?"

"No," I answered, drawing my little body to its utmost height. "And why not?"

"Because you've been unkind to mamma and cruel to me, and because you think there's nobody but Betsy Beauty. And I'll tell them at the convent that you are making mamma ill, and you're as bad as . . . as bad as the bad women in the Bible!"

"My gracious!" said Aunt Bridget, and she tried to laugh, but I could see that her face became as white as a whitewashed wall. This did not trouble me in the least until I reached the carriage, when Father Dan, who was sitting inside, said:

"My little Mary won't leave home like that—without kissing her aunt and saying good-bye to her cousins."

So I returned and shook hands with Nessy MacLeod and Betsy Beauty, and lifted my little face to my Aunt Bridget.

"That's better," she said, after she had kissed me, but when I had passed her my quick little ear caught the words:

"Good thing she's going, though."

During this time my father, with the morning mist playing like hoarfrost about his iron-gray hair, had been trampling the gravel and arranging the horses were getting cold, so that I was no sooner bundled into the carriage and banged the door on me.

But hardly had we started when Father Dan, who was blinking his little eyes and pretending to blow his nose on his colored print handkerchief, said, "Look!" and pointed up to my mother's room.

There she was again, waving and kissing her hand to me through her open window, and she continued to do so until we swirled round some trees and I lost the sight of her.

What happened in my mother's room when her window was closed I do not know, but I well remember that, creeping into a corner of the carriage, I forgot all about the glory and grandeur of going away, and that it did not help me to remember when half way down the drive a boy darkened by somebody who stood in the doorway.

It was a tall boy, almost a man, and I knew in a moment who he was. He was the young Lord Raa. And at first I thought how handsome and well dressed he was as he looked down at me and smiled. After a moment he stepped into the cabin and sat in front of me and said:

"So you are little Mary O'Neill, are you?"

I did not speak. I was thinking he was not so very handsome after all, having two big front teeth like Betsy Beauty.

"The girl who ought to have been a boy and put my nose out, eh?"

Still I did not speak. I was thinking his voice was like Nessy MacLeod's—shrill and harsh and grating.

"Poor little mite! Going all the way to Rome to a convent, isn't she?"

Even yet I did not speak. I was thinking his eyes were like Aunt Bridget's—cold and gray and piercing.

"So silent and demure, though! Quite a little nun already! A deuced pretty one, too, if anybody asks me."

I was beginning to have a great contempt for him.

"Where did you get those big angel eyes from? Stole them from some picture of the Madonna, I'll swear."

"THE SPITFIRE."

By this time I had concluded that he was not worth speaking to, so I turned my head and I was looking back at the sea, when I heard him say:

"I suppose you are going to give me a kiss, you nice little woman, aren't you?"

"No."

"Oh, but you must—we are relations, you know."

"I won't."

He laughed at that, and rising from his seat, he reached over to kiss me, whereupon I drew one of my hands out of my muff and doubling my little mittened fist, I struck him in the face.

Joking, as I afterwards learned, a young autocrat, much indulged by servants and generally tyrannizing over them, he was surprised and angry.

"The spitfire!" he said. "Who would have believed it? The face of a nun and the temper of a devil! But you'll have to make amends for this, my lady."

With that he went away and I saw no more of him until the steamer was drawing up at the landing stage at Liverpool, and then, while the passengers were gathering up their luggage, he came back with Father Dan, and the tall sallow man who was his guardian, and said:

"Going to give me that kiss to make amends, or are you to owe me a grudge for the rest of your life, my lady?"

"My little Mary couldn't owe a grudge to anybody," said Father Dan. "Shall it, then, be his lordship and make amends, I'm certain."

And then I did to the young Lord Raa what I had done to Aunt Bridget—I held up my face and he kissed me.

It was a little, simple, trivial incident, but it led with other things to the most lamentable fact of my life, and when I think of it I sometimes wonder how it comes to pass that He who numbers the flowers of the field and counts the sparrows as they fall has no handwriting with which to warn His children that footsteps may not fall.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The grill in the little door was first opened and then a lady in a black habit with a black band around her forehead and white bands down each side of her face opened the door itself and asked us to step in, and when we had done so, she took us down a long passage into a warm room, where another lady, dressed in the same way, only a little grander, sat in a big armchair.

Gossip from the State House

The caucus of the Democratic members-elect of the House resulted in many surprises. The first came in Representative Martin M. Lomasney's declination of the speakership nomination, which had been tendered to him by the vote of all but two members. They were representatives John F. Sullivan and William E. Hickey of Boston.

• • •

Representative Peter F. Tague of Charlestown, chairman of the Democratic Legislative campaign committee, was nominated unanimously. Lomasney seconded the nomination.

• • •

The Republican Representatives-elect will meet in caucus at the State House and go through the formality of nominating Speaker Cushing.

• • •

Neither party has enough votes to elect, there being no majority party in this year's House, for the first time in the history of the State.

• • •

There is increasing talk of a combination of the Democrats and Progressives in case the first ten ballots result in a deadlock.

• • •

"Curley" will carry Ward 1 by a thousand votes," says Representative-elect "Bill" Doyle. Wow-Wow!

EAT NEW BREAD, CABBAGE, SAUSAGE, AND DIGEST IT. "PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN"

No indigestion, no sour, gassy stomach or dyspepsia. Try it!

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, let this down. Pape's Diapepsin digests anything, leaves nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most, is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear. Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any druggist. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Hot Tea Breaks A Cold—Try This

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip. It opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

CASSIDY TELLS OF FRAUDS IN BUTTER STORES

By H. P. CASSIDY.

James W. Helline, State dairy and food commissioner of Michigan, a short time ago gave other officials of the country some lessons on how to get before the people deceptive practices, by a butter store, in his State. The concern signs, reading "Creamery, 10 cents per Pound," conveying to the public that the real product of the farm, creamery butter, was on sale. Complaints were made to the commissioner by customers, who found when they reached home they had a pound print of oleomargarine.

The commissioner gave warning repeatedly to this firm to quit this sort of advertising. When no attention was paid, he placed a half page advertisement in the newspapers carrying a picture, which portrayed signs as above described, and further details outlining the public. The commissioner's unique method has given him some fame throughout the country.

Mr. Helline discusses some lotions used in barber shops. The government brought about the seizure of an ointment of international reputation not long ago. It was guaranteed to remove pimples, and beautify your complexions. Analysis of this much extolled beautifier showed it contained corrosive sublimate, a powerful and dangerous drug. Mr. Helline says:

"When the lord of creation visits the barber shop to have the hair removed from his chin, and encouraged on his topknot, he is confronted by a row of bottles, all of which the barber recommends to reforest the barren areas of his head.

"Some mathematical sharp has figured it up, that at fifteen cents an application the barber clears the tidy sum of $48 on each gallon of dope he disposes of.

A FRIEND OF THE WORKINGMAN

Five years ago I was so troubled with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder that I had to leave working my farm. Life looked dark to me until I heard of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root through a cured friend. I tried a bottle and began to feel better at once. After using five or six bottles I felt fine, and have continued to work as I had before my affliction.

I want to state that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is a kidney medicine that will cure, and I owe my good work during the past five or six years to it. Yours very truly,

C. W. MORRIS.

MISS ELEANOR SALTONSTALL, who is prominent in settlement house charity work.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Prominent among the girls who during the Winter months do much for charity in the various settlement houses is pretty Eleanor Saltonstall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall of Bay State road, who was among the prominent buds of but a few seasons ago, when she was consider the belle and beauty of her year. She is a sister of Muriel G. Saltonstall, a recent bud, and also of Everett H. and Richard Saltonstall, Jr.

I saw Miss Saltonstall on the street the other day, and later at the opera, where she was surrounded by a group of her young girl friends, all chatting merrily over their plans for some event of the near future. What they were to wear was the all important problem, and who was to be there. Miss Saltonstall was in a becoming suit of dark blue cloth and a pretty cream lace waist, with a cluster of roses tucked in her girdle.

Tonight comes the long anticipated Sears ball, when pretty Phyllis Sears, whose debut has been delayed by the death last Fall of her grandfather, will be presented at the event which her father, Herbert Sears, is giving for her at the Copley-Plaza. Miss Sears is one of the very wealthiest young heiresses in Boston society, and that her ball will be a brilliant one, goes without saying. She is clever and exceedingly popular.

Another large and interesting affair prefacing the Sears ball will be the dinner which Mrs. Charles E. Perkins is giving at the Algonquin Club, in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Edith Perkins. One hundred guests have been bidden to the Perkins dinner.

Another interesting event this evening is the dinner which Mrs. Edgarton Chinchester is giving at the Brae-Burn Club. Mrs. Edwin Sheafe is entertaining at dinner this evening, in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Anne Sheafe.

At one of the classes of Lincoln House, in which settlement so many prominent society girls are interested, Mrs. Cora Lamping Nolan of the Marinello Shop on Boylston street, yesterday, gave a demonstration on proper care of the scalp and hair. Miss Alice Stackpole of Beacon street and her corps of efficient society girls are giving class work and demonstrations at the Settlements, three evenings a week.

WOMEN OF THE CANADIAN CLUB LAUD CASSIDY

Harry P. Cassidy, the BOSTON AMERICAN'S pure food expert, addressed the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Club of Boston at the headquarters, Chauncy Hall Building, No. 585 Boylston street. The meeting was largely attended.

Mr. Cassidy and the Boston AMERICAN received a rising vote of thanks for the commendable work done in the pure food campaign. The motion of thanks was made by Mrs. O. L. Story, president of the Auxiliary.

Samples of adulterated foods were exhibited by Mr. Cassidy. He told of the practices and deceptions of fraudulent dealers and manufacturers. He explained how the Boston AMERICAN had championed pure food laws in Massachusetts and brought about the adoption of corrective laws and reforms which meant much to the public health.

Mr. Cassidy explained that Massachusetts had no law governing the sale of ice cream until last Summer, and that although the standard secured then was not what had been desired, it was a big improvement. He told the women that they should insist upon pure food. He said they had much power if they would take the trouble to exercise it.

They should make known their protests to their legislators; they should demand laws that would protect the public, he said. Much enthusiasm was shown in Mr. Cassidy's views.

5 of Hub Liner's Crew Arrested

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 7.—Five members of the firecoon crew of the Merchants and Miners liner Gloucester were arrested when the steamer docked here today, charged with robbing the cargoes of the vessel.

According to F. H. Haines, inspector of terminals for the company, with headquarters in Baltimore, the men have been systematically stealing from the ship for several years. He estimates that the loss to the company through these operations will total between $8,000 and $9,000. They will be taken to Baltimore for trial.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the poison, undigested waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

HARVARD SEVEN BATTLES AMHERST IN ANNUAL GAME ON THE ICE HERE TONIGHT

CRIMSON SEVEN IN ANNUAL GAME WITH AMHERST

The Harvard and Amherst hockey teams will open their annual game at the Arena tonight, and a close and interesting battle is expected. This will be the first appearance of the Harvard seven on the local rink before the Christmas holidays, and the latter part of the season's schedule will be played after the holidays. The Crimson players have their eyes on Yale, as the latter will turn out to welcome them for the loss of two games to the Blue, who is great disappointment to the followers of that institution. From now until the end of the season the second will be under the care of Coach Hallett, who has an all-around improvement in hockey in mind. Hallett is also engaged in mapping the exact strength of the Amherst seven. It is reported that the Sabrinas are impressed by a fast aggregation of hockey players, who have developed rapidly under the coaching of John Henry, the Washington catcher who is wintering in Amherst.

As the final selection of the Harvard team has not been made, Coach Wendell will not practically his entire squad into the combat. The game will start at 8:15.

Carlisle Braves Plan Invasion of Chicago

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The Carlisle Indian football team plans to invade Chicago next fall, and negotiations are now under way for a post season game there with Notre Dame. Coach Glenn Warner of Carlisle and Coach Jesse Harper recently met in this city and discussed the possibilities for a game. Both agreed that the game would prove a big attraction in the Middle West.

Bates Arranges Fine Baseball Schedule

LEWISTON, Me., Jan. 7.—Bates' baseball schedule for next season has been announced as follows:

April 22, Pilgrims at Lewiston; 23, S. S. Leagues team at Portland; 27, Boston College at Boston; 28, Harvard at Cambridge; 29, Holy Cross at Worcester. May 2, Colby at Waterville; 5, Auburn at Lewiston; 9, University of Maine at Orono; 12, University of Maine at Orono; 20, Colby at Lewiston; 22, Tufts at Lewiston; 23, N. H. State at Durham; 27, N. H. state at Lewiston; 28, Auburn at Auburn; 30, Bowdoin at Brunswick. June 3, Bowdoin at Brunswick; 7, Colby at Augusta (exhibition).

Outlaws' Action Isn't Worrying Murphy

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.— Charles W. Murphy, boss of the Cubs, says he has no cause to worry over the action of the Federal League. He isn't afraid that he will lose any of his players. Already he possesses signed contracts from twenty of the players, with more coming in each mail. Men like Archer, Donovan, Cheney, Zimmerman and Evers have signed long contracts.

Coast Awarded Two Big Auto Races

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The grand prize and the Vanderbilt cup automobile races have been awarded to Los Angeles by the American Automobile Club of America. The Vanderbilt will be held February 21, and the grand prize February 22.

Big Wrestling Card Planned for Jan. 20

Promoter George W. Tinkey will conduct Tinkey's stage at Mechanics building on January 20. The card has not yet been announced, but it is learned from a reliable source that it will contain one of the best sets of matches ever staged in this city.

Japs to Send Ball Team in Summer

The University of Keo, Tokio, Japan, is going to send a baseball team to this country next Summer. The Keo team will first arrive in Los Angeles and then work their way across the continent.

From Ringside And Bleachers

ABOUT JACK JOHNSON.

A STUPID, OVERGROWN, mentally stunted black baby named Jack Johnson is just now getting more than his due share of the limelight.

While we have no particular admiration for him, we owe him something for supplying some of the keenest humor that emanated from that garret for many months.

* * *

For instance, it seems that a number of Europeans who take boxing seriously because they are making money out of it—thereby demonstrating that they are not essentially different from sporty guys who are interested in nothing—have seemingly formed an International Boxing Federation, and as solemnly they have barred Jack Johnson from the ring. Hence they have just taken the title away from him without the formality of fighting him for it, apparently never getting the slightest thrill for each be decided out of condition there wouldn't be much chance if he trained.

* * *

Then a preternaturally solemn gink writes that he doesn't think Johnson will get into the best condition again, and at his best "he was never in the first class, according to many shrewd critics." Now, then, did you ever think of that? "Never in the first class." Well, well! And here we have been going along for years thinking he was the greatest prize fighter that ever lived. It only shows that you never can learn. But we would give something to know who "shrewd critics" the author of those historic lines consulted before he penned em.

* * *

He goes on to say that Johnson is highly indignant and declares he will return to America. This will undoubtedly please a number of his fellow citizens who are earnestly desirous of putting him in the house-gow for an indefinite spell as soon as they lay hands on him.

* * *

Taking it all around, Johnson is about as unpopular as any champion of the world that we ever heard of. It would be cheering to believe that this is due to the fact that he is a convicted felon, but the weight of evidence here and abroad is against this uplifting theory. Great financial hopes are impossible of liquidation so long as the title of "champion of the world" is held by an invincible fighter. He undoubtedly ought to be in the penitentiary. There is no question that he is an undesirable citizen, but we can, offhand, recall the name of no pugilist who is so particularly useful member of any community.

Catcher Howley Is Baseball's Traveler

Catcher Dan Howley, who played last year with the Phillies, is one of the greatest little baseball travelers in the business. Howley comes from Weymouth, and several years ago he was purchased by the Indianapolis team of the American Association.

The Indianapolis Club farmed him out to the Grand Rapids team and at the end of the season recalled him. The next year the Indianapolis Club farmed him out to the Utica team of the New York State League. He was drafted by the Cleveland Club and Manager Nap turned him over to the Portland (ore). Club.

Jack Tar to Pitch for Norfolk Team

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 7.—A. J. Cochran, star pitcher of the United States Navy, is signed to play with the Norfolk team of the Virginia League next year. Cochran is a member of the crew of the battleship Louisiana. His team won the championship of the Atlantic fleet last year. His enlistment will expire on January 24.

Hyde Park Quintets to Clash in Series

On next Friday evening, the Hyde Park professional basketball team will play the first of a series of games with the Hyde Park A. A. at Waverly Hall. The rivalry between these two teams is intense and all indications point to a close and fast game. Great difficulty has been experienced in securing a capable referee.

Davis Will Lead Commerce Eleven

William Davis, right tackle, has been elected captain of the High School of Commerce football team for 1914. Besides being an athlete of exceptional merit, Davis stands high in his class studies.

Atlanta Club Loses Charley Alperman

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 7.—Charles Alperman, captain of last season's Atlanta Southern League club, says that he has returned his 1914 contract to the club unsigned.

Wanamaker Nearly O. K.

Clarence Wanamaker, forward of the Dartmouth hockey team, who was injured in the game with the Pilgrim A. A. last Wednesday, will be able to play again within a few days.

MARTIN MEETS JASPER BEFORE WEBSTER CLUB

By JACK CONWAY.

"YOU" JASPER and Terry Martin are ready for their twelve-round bout, which will be staged before the Lakeside A. C. in Webster tonight, and neither boxer will be able to offer an excuse if defeated. The contest has aroused considerable interest throughout New England, and is expected to be witnessed by a large crowd of fans.

Jasper is one of the leading welterweights in this section of the country. He has exchanged blows with many of the best boys in New England and has usually given a good account of himself.

The North End boy is a straight, hard puncher and is fairly clever. He believes that his youth and speed will enable him to outpoint the veteran Martin.

Terry went to Webster yesterday in order to rest up for the tussle. He asserts that he will breeze in a winner and that he will then hurl a challenge at Joe Chick of Gloucester.

A good preliminary card has been arranged. Paddy Manning and E. Pollinger will clash in a ten-round contest, while "Young" Beaudy of Southbridge will exchange blows with Steve Bigney of Worcester in a six-round whirl. Bigney recently knocked out Beaudy but the latter claims he will "come back" tonight.

BOB MOHA will display his stock in trade before the Marlowe A. C. in Rhode Island this evening. The Milwaukee middleweight is scheduled to meet Jack Fitzgerald of Philadelphia in a fifteen-round contest and plenty of action is expected. Moha is one of the leading 158-pound boxers in the country. He has met the majority of the title contenders and has given a good account of himself in most of his bouts. Bob recently stopped Freddy Hicks in New York. Hicks is far from being a champion, but Moha was the only middleweight who was able to send him to the canvas for the count.

Fitzgerald is a veteran of the ring. Nobody has ever accused him of being a world-beater, but he usually gives satisfaction.

A MERRY little boxing war is expected in Rhode Island this Winter. Jack Doherty is promoting bouts in Marteville, while Tommy Walsh of Woonsocket is planning to open a club in Thornton. It is stated that Mike Slattery is the man behind Walsh. If this is true, Doherty will have plenty of opposition and will have to put on the best of shows if his club is to continue to be a financial success.

FEW new clubs are being opened in the other New England States. A number of clubs are holding shows in Maine, but not many of them are doing very well. E. W. Hanks has placed Augusta on the boxing map again and should make good, as he knows the boxing game thoroughly and has the confidence of the "fans."

CHARLEY SHEPPARD, the New York featherweight who has been in Boston for several months, is seeking matches. Sheppard has met a number of the leading boys in his class, including the skilful Jimmy Walsh. Sheppard claims he only weighs 124 pounds and asserts that he is ready to sign for a bout with any boy of his weight. The Gotham featherweight is a good performer, and may be relied on to give satisfaction.

ARE YOU READING WALTER CAMP'S SPORT STORIES IN THE AMERICAN?

Walter Camp.

World's Greatest Athletic Expert Writes Exclusively for the AMERICAN.

The man who coached the Yale eleven to scores of famous victories, whose all-American football teams are accepted as the standard, and who is recognized as the foremost athletic authority in the world, has been obtained to write for the sporting pages of the AMERICAN. Camp's stories, dealing with all branches of athletics, are sure to prove entertaining to fans in any line of sport. His articles are appearing exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN, and, beginning next week, in the daily AMERICAN also.

Camp is the master mind of the football world. No revision of the rules is accomplished without his aid. He knows track athletics, baseball, swimming, and is even an authority on polo. For years throughout the world his name has stood for all that is clean and honest in sports.

"Fitz Barred for Humane Reasons"

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Frank S O'Neil, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, says that Bob Fitzsimmons has been barred from contests in this State for humane reasons only. O'Neil declares that the boxing game would be severely scored if Fitzsimmons, Maher, Sharkey, Choynski, McCoy and other old fighters were permitted to return to the ring.

Coast Hurlers to Be Judged on Merits

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Pacific Coast League pitchers in future seasons will be judged on their actual pitching merits instead of on their percentage of victories. President A. T. Haun expects shortly to issue a code of rules for his scorers to be observed next year. In it he will instruct them to keep a record of all earned runs, or, to be more exact, the number of runs made for which the pitcher is responsible.

Ritchie Has Won Some Big Purses

Willie Ritchie, world's lightweight champion, if he gets $15,000 for boxing Tommy Murphy in San Francisco on January 23, will have earned nearly $50,000 since he won the title from Ad Wolgast a year ago last November.

Diamond Belt for Middleweight Bout

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 7.—To the winner of the January 17 match in Vernon will go a diamond studded belt, emblematic of the middleweight championship. Tom McCarey is to be the donor. Jimmy Clabby, Hammond's star 158-pounder, will be one of the opponents and either Mike Gibbons or Sailor Petroskey will oppose him. The match can be secured by McFarland if he wants to do 145 pounds ringside.

Avenue A. A. Seeks Basketball Games

The Avenue A. A. basketball team of Roxbury, under the careful coaching of Artuh Eddy, the former college star, has developed into a fast, clean-playing quintet, and is desirous of meeting any 111-120-pound team in New England. From seventeen candidates, the following have been picked to represent the Triple A: Casey and Bergh, forwards; Madden, centre; Wright and Kelly, backs and King, substitute. Managers desiring games will be accommodated by communicating with John Casey No. 2451 Washington street, Roxbury.

NEW IDEAS IN AUTOS ABOUND AT BIG SHOW

By J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—There are many new models at the motor show, among them the Jeffery, which is now handled in Boston by C. F. Rockwell, Inc. The use of a light, high speed, high efficiency, bloc type of motor made possible a lighter car throughout, providing vanadium steel and the best imported bearings, couplings and other parts were made use of.

The Overland is showing three models on four-cylinder chassea. The changes come in the increase of the motor dimensions, the length of the wheel base, and the refinement of the lubrication system. The Overland speeter in particular is attracting attention.

In the Cole booth, both four and six-cylinder cars were displayed, the changes from former construction being enlarged motors and bodies, lengthening of the wheelbase and the use of long-grained, hand-buffed leather upholstery. The Cole has become known as the "standardized car."

The Ford is shown in the salesrooms on Broadway. It is a standardized car continued this year on even a larger manufacturing scale. Manager Charles E. Fay of Boston is in attendance.

The National six-cylinder is shown in two models and four models of four-cylinder chassea. This new six is of the streamline type. The motor, whose cylinder bore gives it a rating of 33.75 horsepower, transmits its power through a cone clutch with a three-speed gear set located amidships of the frame. An enclosed propeller shaft with a universal at either end carries the power to the floating axle and a large torque arm takes up the twisting action. W. H. Stevens of Boston is delighted with the National line.

The Chandler is shown for the first time at this show. It is a six-cylinder car possessing power, speed and endurance. Ralph B. Nettleton and G. B. Crittenden of Boston are securing many new friends.

The Chalmers is displaying two models—the 6-60 and the 6-48. The cylinders of the new six are cast in triplets with the exhaust valve on the right and the intake on the left.

Amateur Wrestling Planned for Jan. 31

Amateur wrestling bouts will be featured in the Irish American A. A. carnival to be held at Mechanics Building January 31. Contests will be held in the 125, 145 and heavyweight classes. The committee in charge has made an application to the registration committee of the N. E. A. A. U. to have the title of the local association decided in the different events. It is also intended to bring all the best local wrestlers together to decide the championship.

Last year the New England championships were staged at the Boston Arena after the real wrestling season was over and, judging from the interest that was taken in the bouts, the simon pure game appears to be just as popular in New England as the professional contests.

During the progress of the wrestling contests two mats will be placed in different parts of the hall, so that the contests will be going on all evening.

Lewiston After Site for Baseball Grounds

LEWISTON, Me., Jan. 7.—The city government of Lewiston has appointed a committee to procure suitable grounds for the use of the schools and for organized baseball. This is taken to mean that efforts are being made to transfer the Brockton club of the New England League to Lewiston.

Lannin Is Against Ebbett's Draft Plan

President Joseph Lannin of the Red Sox club is not in favor of Charley Ebbett's new plan for drafting players, so he has informed Ban Johnson. Ebbetts would have it that the weaker clubs get first choice in drafting players.

BASEBALL MEN CALLED OUT AT WENTWORTH

Wentworth Institute has issued the first call for candidates for baseball and by the interest shown by these in attendance a most promising season is looked for.

Teacher-coach George A. Morris, Jr., assisted by Captain McDonald had the boys limbering up their arms by a stiff dumb-bell practice after which Coach Morris looked over the pitchers and was much pleased with the material present.

According to the coach's plan a black-board talk is to be given three days a week and by this method those players who have greater experience may be able to teach the lessons that they have learned by actual experience and so benefit those of lesser experience.

Manager Fish has been working on the schedule and predicts a hard series of games with the best teams in New England including Rhode Island State College, Tweedie Point School, St. John's Prep., Brockton School, and games are pending with Norwich University, Seton Hill, Fordham and Boston College. Any team desiring games may address Manager Albert L. Fish, Wentworth Institute, Huntington avenue, city.

$250,000 Capital of Chicago Outlaws

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Incorporation papers of the Chicago Federal League club have been filed. The capital stock is $250,000 and Charles Weegman, James Gilmore and William M. Walker are named as incorporators.

BOSTON NATIONALS FEEL SAFE IN WAR NOW BEING WAGED BY OUTLAW LEAGUE

PLAYERS WIN ALL BUT TWO OF REQUESTS

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 7.—Following the acceptance of fifteen of the seventeen requests submitted by the Baseball Players' to the National Commission and a committee from the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, baseball men here today awaited other activities which might grow out of the meeting.

The two demands which were turned down by the opposing faction were of minor importance.

In fifteen of their requests the players were practically successful. A slight compromise was effected in your requests and the Fraternity players waved two requests entirely.

President Fultz of the Baseball Players' Fraternity said after the meeting:

"Of course we should like to have left the room with the commission, and the minor leagues conceding all of our requests, which we considered just. But, we are perfectly satisfied. We got as much as we expected and possibly a little more. We have no complaints and we were treated royally."

During the dinner which followed the conference there were many extemporaneous speeches, in which it was brought out that there are few, if any, vital differences between the players and the club owners.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League and a member of the National Commission, said that any disputes could have been "easily and readily adjusted had it not been for the lawyer- president of the Fraternity, David Fultz."

Wizard Mike Gibbons to Box McAllister

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Manager Billy Gibson of the Garden A. C., has arranged a match between Bob McAllister and Mike Gibbons, to take place at the Garden next Monday night.

The men have agreed to meet at 162 pounds ringside. The bouts announced for the next Garden card, between Labane and Fleming and Dundee and O'Neil, have been set back to a later date because Fleming is not in condition to box and Dundee is under contract to box at another club next week.

Jimmy Power Breaks New Zealand Record

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—According to advices received here, Jimmy Power of the Boston Athletic Association and Templeton of the San Francisco Olympic Club, members of the All-American track team, broke records in a meet held in Wellington, N. Z. Power established a New Zealand 880 record of 1 minute 55 seconds. Templeton broke the New Zealand and Australian pole vault record, leaping eleven feet two inches.

New Manager Soon for Gunboat Smith

According to word from San Francisco, Gunboat Smith, now considered the white heavyweight champion of the world, will make his second plunge into the sea of matrimony on the 14th of this month, when he marries Helen Remley, "a native daughter." Smith will not get the final decree in his suit for divorce from his first wife until the 13th.

Mike Glover to Box Jack Britton Again

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Jack Britton of Chicago was matched to box ten rounds with Mike Glover of Boston at the National Sporting Club on January 19. The weight will be 146 pounds ringside. Several weeks ago Glover outpointed Britton in ten rounds at a Brooklyn club. Hence the return match.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. Mitchell

OF course, the Federal League is not going into the baseball business to help the "down-trodden" ball player. The men behind the new organization are going into the baseball business because they think there are fortunes to be made in it.

IN selecting their circuit they do not seem to have bothered with the question of whether there is any demand for another baseball league. They are going into cities where they think they can become established, trusting the Lord will be with them. If they gain a foothold they will doubtless change their circuit from time to time until things become settled. But at this writing the time when things will become settled seems a long way off.

IF wars between nations the nation that has money or can get money is the nation that usually wins. The same holds good in a baseball war. It will take a vast sum of money to swing the Federal League into success.

IF the backers of the Feds win their fight and establish themselves, it doesn't necessarily mean that their road to big dividends is in sight. That is something time alone can tell. The baseball public will answer the question, and if the baseball public does not pay their money to support the Federal League in most of the cities of the circuit, the "outlaws" will be lucky to save their financial skins.

OF course, it is the easiest thing in the world to secure managers for the Federal League teams. Ball players are so constituted that the greatest ambition of their lives is to become managers. The Feds will have no trouble at all in signing eight managers from the big leagues. Let them pick out the men they want and say to them:

"Here, we want you to manage our ball clubs," and the players can't get to pen and ink fast enough.

THE new league had no difficulty in landing Tinker as manager. Nor did Mordecai Brown hesitate. Otto Knabe, who has had managerial aspirations for a year or two, will fall over himself to sign a Fed contract as soon as it was offered. He had an appointment to meet President Baker of the Phillies, but when the Feds came along and mentioned the magic word, "manager," Otto simply couldn't wait another second.

THE new league has attracted a great amount of attention by the spectacular stunt of signing Tinker just as the Cubs when Tinker held the centre of the baseball spotlight. And there is no doubt but that other players of the big league will be influenced by the action of Tinker and Brown and Knabe.

THE National and American Leagues have already made up their playing schedules for the coming year. The American Association and the International League will make their schedules in a short time if they have not already done so. Of course, all of these schedules will be found to be similar to the schedules of years past. The National and American Leagues will have few, if any, conflicting dates.

NOW, the Federals will find it simply impossible to arrange their schedule so that it will not conflict with the four leagues in "organized" baseball mentioned above. In Chicago and St. Louis they are bound to rub against either the Nationals or Americans. And it will simply be impossible to arrange their dates in Kansas City, Baltimore, Toronto, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh and Buffalo to avoid clashing with rival clubs. This is because both the American Association and the International League are able to make up a schedule in any way they like, having no other clubs in the cities of their circuit.

ED SMITH'S TALKS ON SPORTS

By ED W. SMITH.

EVEN if the doubting ones do not accept Gunboat Smith as the real thing among the white heavyweights of the day, the Gunner can claim the honors for a little while at least. Luther McCarthy was the last man to hold a clear deed to the title, and as Pelkey was the last man to battle him he has as good a claim to the title as anybody. Now that Smith has disposed of Pelkey his path is clear. About the only man thought to stand in the Gunboat's way in the least is Jess Willard, and only last August Smith defeated him in a twenty-round battle out on the Pacific coast.

* * *

THERE'S one admirable thing about Smith that should endear him to the fight fan. He has the punch and isn't afraid to use it. He is aggressive and fights all the time, although the accounts of his battle with Pelkey would indicate that he used more than his usual amount of caution. He simply wanted to make sure of it—that's all.

* * *

GLANCING over the field there isn't much in sight in this country right now for Smith and we wouldn't blame Jim Buckley, his manager, much if he sought foreign shores for game. There is a nice purse awaiting Smith on the other side with Georges Carpentier as the opposition. Inasmuch as both Frank Klaus and Billy Papke, beaten middleweights on this side, have trimmed the French star he shouldn't be much more than an ordinary handful for the Gunboat.

* * *

IT IS impossible to take Tommy Burns seriously in his reported wish to be a comeback. The rolly-polly Tommy would require weeks to get into shape, and we doubt if he ever could be fitted for a hard battle. It's hard to figure out how a man of Tom's means—for he must be worth close to a quarter of a million dollars—can wish to take up the harrowing grind again. But there surely is a glamour about the spotlight of the ring that doesn't attach to any other game. This is the only way we can figure out the Burns desire to try and regain his title.

Denies Leach Is to Manage Federal Club

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 7.—President John R. Barbour of the Pittsburgh Federal League, when informed of the dispatch from Chicago that Tommy Leach would be offered the managership of the local club, denied that such was the case. He added:

"Any announcement concerning the Pittsburgh club or its manager will come from our city. We have several men under consideration and expect to announce the name of our manager in the next three or four days."

Sox Offer Nashville Exhibition Dates

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 7.—The Nashville club of the Southern League has been offered a series of three exhibition games by the Boston Red Sox to be played as the Boston club journeys east from its Spring training camp at Hot Springs April 1, 2 and 4 are the dates that the Boston club desires to play in this city.

Cleveland Naps Get No-Hit No-Run Hurler

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 7.—Matt Hynes, a pitcher drafted by the Portland Coast League team from the Canadian League, has been turned over to the Cleveland American League team. Hynes pitched a no-hit no-run game early last season against Vancouver, the team which later won the championship of the Northwest League.

Tom Daly to Coach Yankees' Pitchers

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Thomas P. Daly, at one time a leading National League catcher, has been signed by President Farrell of the New York Americans to coach the Yankees' pitchers. Daly was recommended by Manager Frank Chance. He will go to Houston, Tex., to assume his duties on March 1. Daly became famous as a catcher under Anson, who signed him in 1889.

'Big Money' Induced Otto Knabe to Jump

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—The Baltimore stockholders' treated me very liberally and I can't lose much," said F. Otto Knabe on his return from Baltimore where he signed a contract to manage the Federal League baseball team there. "I have half my money now," he added.

"Signing with the Federals was simply a matter of business. Any other man in organized baseball, I think, if placed in a similar situation, would do exactly as I have done—better my financial condition.

"The Federals offered me far more than organized baseball ever had done and more than I expected it ever would do, so I took what I considered the best opportunity to make terms with Baltimore."

Maine-Harvard Split Football Relations

ORONO, Me., Jan. 7.—The Universities of Maine's preliminary schedules for this year's baseball and football games have been announced as follows. According to the present plans, Maine will not play Harvard in football this year.

75 Tons of Lead for Keel of Defiance

BATH, Me., Jan. 7.—With the arrival of seventy-five tons of lead for the keel of the Defiance, a candidate for the defence of the America's cup, plans for being laid for the placing of the lead into the mould, has been all but completed, work will be commenced very soon.

The metal to be used in the manufacture of the Defiance's blocks will be given an unusually severe test at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

BRAVES' HEADS NOT WORRYING OVER FEDERALS

Secretary Herman Nickerson of the Boston National League baseball club issued a statement in which he declares that not half of players jumping to the Federal League will be signed by the Federal officials to become without foundation. The statement follows:

With all the attendant nonsense exercised about baseball players attempts to raid major league ball clubs for players, the Boston National League club feels safe insofar as it has had no indication of any member of the team's roster to be at least dissatisfied with treatment in the past.

"President James R. Gaffney has not only contracts to his players and will not do so until the time for the commission has passed, after the Federal League Baseball Club of Pittsburgh declares that these demands are in every particular reasonable, and in the opinion of the Boston club, no interest would certainly grant the requests.

"All talk of players jumping from the Boston club to the Federal League is ridiculous and without foundation, for two of the players mentioned have been in 1914 and are content to remain with the major league.

George E. Phair Says:

Max Carey of the Pirates is selling diamonds in St. Louis, thereby proving that he is only a ball player. If he were a magnate he would be selling gold bricks.

* * *

It is good policy to secure Walter Johnson for baseball, but we'd hate to take the job of insulting the fellows he pitches against.

* * *

One thing we can't understand about Georges Carpentier is that he hit Frank Klaus on the jaw and then failed to sustain a fracture of the nail.

* * *

We have a certain amount of respect for Gunboat Smith, who has eliminated a few white hopes, but if we were a member of a boxing commission our first move would be to introduce a rule limiting all heavyweight fights to one moment.

* * *

Charlie Ebbets's method for baseball players may be a boon to the public, but what we need just now is a school for baseball magnates.

* * *

Our heavyweights may be all to the bad, but we hope that when Georges Carpentier hits our hospitable shores he has enough money to pay his fare back.

* * *

Mr. Murphy refutes the story that Heine Zim is on the market. Mr. Murphy had the said refutation in mind when he gave out the story that Heine Zim was on the market.

* * *

Gustav Frischolz, the Bohemian wrestling champion, is said to be working in a bathhouse, thereby demonstrating that he is not one of the Bohemians we read about.

* * *

A report from the American Association shows that Erbe Cole was the iron man in that organization. He was the same in the National League but the iron settled in his head.

* * *

Geography has much to do with the Joe Birmingham get-a-move-on car from his slave owner, whereas, if he had been working in Cincinnati he would have been presented with a van.

* * *

We are surprised to read in one of the papers that Fred Hanlon has resigned as umpire in the Federal League team. We thought Mr. Hanlon first name was Ohio.

* * *

When two lawyers express their opinions on the players' contract it sounds not unlike two lions in the left field bleachers expressing their opinions on a decision at the home plate.

* * *

Looking over Mr. Murphy's letter of warning to his chattels, we have just wonder what has become of the Thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution.

* * *

Boxing experts in San Francisco declare that Gunboat Smith is not of champion calibre. But who ever said he was?

White Sox and Giants in Melbourne Series

MELBOURNE, Jan. 7.—The first of the baseball games scheduled for Melbourne between the White Sox, Giants and natives will be played near the Cricket Club grounds today, and a half-holiday has been granted to all government employees. Lord Dudley will head the winning club's team but he has promised to pitch the first ball.

GREATER LOVE

True Story of Boston's Little Lost Sister Who Found Herself

By JANET WRIGHT

CHAPTER XI.

Continued.

"I've got it all figured out, Mary," she declared. "We'll need about ten dollars beside our fare over there. Then it's a cinch. This is the Christmas season—or will be in a couple of weeks, and we can get a job at any store in town.

"After that leave it to me. I'm wise to how to make good in the world. Her tone was profoundly confident. "In a month we'll be on easy street.

"But were would we live?" whispered Mary doubtfully. She was a timorous child—only the bold spirit of the older girl had her own admiration for. Agnes could have made her do almost anything in the plain.

"Shucks—anywhere," retorted Agnes from her deep knowledge, full of boarding house lore. "We'll get a cinch. We look enough alike to find a room in about two clicks."

* * *

After Mary's assent was won there remained still the question of finance. Agnes was earning $5 a week at a department store, and of one of the scores. She paid board of $2.50 a week for board and room, and the confidence of youth in her. She had a vague idea that she could get similar terms in the big city of New York, and $2.50 a week would suffice for both.

STOLE THE SOCIAL.

But she had estimated that they needed a reserve of at least ten dollars to support them in comfort till they began to earn money, and even on this ridiculous basis the trip was far out of reach of their pocketbooks. Sufficient fare alone meant over ten dollars for the two of them, and so for the help a capital of at least twenty dollars was essential.

Mary confessed that she had little over a dollar saved toward Christmas. Agnes had almost three dollars. Between them they counted up just four dollars and twenty-two cents.

"Never mind," said Agnes sharply at this conclusion. "I'll get the rest—somehow."

* * *

She stole it—though she would never call any fair straining, even in her own mind, to some queer way of her own. She reasoned that her aunt and uncle had not done enough for her—not all the eight years they had kept her—to take money from them was simply reclaiming what was really her own. From the innocent looking thing on the mantel in the front parlor, which she knew the household budget was stored, she abstracted three five-dollar bills. Not with any intent to wages in a lump the two girls had together three dollars and a few cents over for their great adventure.

It was the first week in December when they left home. They took a morning train to New York and set their faces toward the unknown with perfect confidence—at least on Agnes' part—that all would be well.

LIKE TWO SQUIRRELS

They were ever so interested in the rattling panorama outside the car. Mary sat next to the window, and Agnes leaned across her and they chattered like two little squirrels through the first hour of the trip. But gradually then a timorous little silence settled upon Mary. With each mile further from her home her courage failed so much the more, and it was only the confident strength of Agnes there beside her, that kept her from breaking into tears and begging to go back.

The trip acted like wine on Agnes. She was jubilant, vivacious, overflowing cheering. She was a host to herself, and under the influence of the older girl's personality, and the excitement of the trip, so they were, Mary gradually lost the fear of the future and the longing for the past. Little things would have saddened a hardier heart if it had been Mary's. At any rate they accepted this young man as a friend.

"Are you strangers?" he asked pleasantly. Agnes nodded.

"We just came from Boston. We're going to work here."

"Are you have positions?"

"No," the elder girl explained eagerly, "but we know we can get work very quickly."

"No doubt you were expecting friends to meet you."

"Oh, no—we have no friends in New York."

SMILE WAS FRIENDLY

His smile became even more friendly. Ah—then I can be of assistance to you," he assured them. And the two were pathetically ready to accept any help he could give.

"I can recommend you to several good boarding houses," he pursued. "About what do you want to pay?"

His tone was so practical, so commonplace, that any slightest cause of distrust vanished. Agnes told him. "We want as cheap a place as we can get that is respectable. She named a rate of pay which must have made the man smile inwardly.

"I know just the place for you," he declared. "There is a good soul on who has a boarding house on Ninth avenue. She keeps it mostly to help girls like yourself than for gain, and the result is her rates are very low. I will give you the address. You had better write it down."

He gave Agnes a pencil, and on an envelope from her hand bag she wrote the address he gave. A moment later, after a word of encouragement, he had turned away, but Agnes called anxiously:

"But—how do we get there. We're strangers you see."

He came back at once—and glanced at the line of cars which passes continually to and fro along Forty-second street. "Do you see that red car?" He asked—pointing to one approaching. "Get on that and tell the conductor to let you off at—" he named a street. "This number is midway of that block, on Ninth avenue."

He did not offer to help them on the car, but moved swiftly away, and a moment later the two girls were telling the conductor where they wished to alight.

WITS TOLD TRUTH

Half an hour later saw them climbing the stairs of the house he had indicated. A woman met them at the door. She seemed to expect them—admitted them with a warm welcome.

Agnes had not been in the house five minutes—with her sharp little wits again at work—before she realized what it was.

Agnes and Mary Riley spent a week in this Ninth Avenue house. They were treated with the utmost kindness—yet for the older girl the week was one long battle of wits—rapier-clashes with the men and women whom she saw there. The man who had met them at the train appeared often—in different clothes. There were others, and they all paid the two girls every attention—in clothes—trips to the theatre—outings of a dozen kinds.

Agnes' keen senses felt always, however, the steel within the velvet glove. She knew that they were prisoners—and once or twice saw the futility of their prison so near she shivered with dread. The girl was desperate with remorse for having brought Mary into this; and she even forgot her own peril in her determination to return Mary safe to her home at any cost.

Her part in the story up to now has been an unpleasant one—for in her mistaken ideals she had brought not only herself but the younger girl into desperate danger. But from this point on she did everything that human could do to right the wrong. You had better write it down.

This serial is written in the form of the life story of a country girl who fell victim to conditions in Boston. No character appears in the serial that is not taken from real life. No important incident occurs which has not actually happened in Boston within five years. And the conditions portrayed are subdued, rather than exaggerated.

The serial is offered as a picture of the lives of Boston's Little Lost Sisters. It is designed to shed some light on causes underlying the terrible conditions of the city, and it is hoped some remedies may be suggested.

The facts upon which the serial is based were given to the AMERICAN by one of Boston's best informed social workers, who vouches for every statement. The serial is in the form of the life story of JANET WRIGHT—one of the little Lost Sisters who found herself—and is told by herself.

A GREETING.

They wandered, about—a few steps at a time—starting on every hand—hoping for some kindly, for, a word of cheer or direction—feeling very much alone. Agnes did not know where she wanted to go—had no idea in what part of the city they might find cheap, respectable rooms. In Boston she was as much at home as a country girl in her own village would have been. But in New York she felt suddenly very small and helpless.

Mary noticed the curious attention, and would have called to her friend, had they not been through the gates of the waiting room. Just the street, and outside were cars coming and going in an endless, confusing procession.

At the sight of so familiar a thing Mary's courage returned. "Well go out and ask a conductor," she suggested, and with Mary clinging to her arm, Agnes pushed through the crowd to the curb.

It was with difficulty they secured from the gateman the information that the car they wanted to go on was a Forty-second street car, and which one to take. Then, after an endless, confusing wait, they were aboard.

What they thought a young man with a smiling face and a pair of eyes that were red and swollen. He was standing on the platform of a departing car, and his gaze, as the two ingenuous girls passed him, fell upon them. Quick as a flash came the two impressions—that the little things would have welcomed a friendly face if it had been within reach. At any rate they accepted this young man as a friend.

"Are you strangers?" he asked pleasantly. Agnes nodded.

"We just came from Boston. We're going to work here."

KEPT MARY IGNORANT

She was able to ape the free, rough and ready manner of the others about her, and while keeping Mary in ignorance of her peril, managed to bring their captors to believe she was of their own kind. By the end of the week she had so won the confidence of the woman who had welcomed them on their arrival at the house that she was given permission to go out alone.

The permission was rescinded that evening, however—just as the desperate girl was holding her breath with the hope that her chance had come. She found herself then in the position of a prisoner held for ransom.

* * * * * *

The next afternoon at half past three she left the house alone for the first time since her arrival there. Mary stayed in her room.

Agnes had no money—only the clothes that had been given her. Fast as she could walk she made her way to a drug store three blocks away. She burst in—found the place empty—and frantically appealed to the druggist. "Please lend me a nickel. It's life and death. I've got to have it—to telephone."

He had had a hard day—perhaps—or was touchened by the city's cynicism. For he only laughed at her. "There's the 'phone," he said. "Patrons furnish their own nickles, though."

A GOOD POLICEMAN

The girl was ready to despair—then on a desperate hope that the telephone company might be more charitable, went into the booth and waited. The operator answered, cried:

"Oh, please let me telephone to the police station. I haven't got any money—but I've got to telephone them."

She had never heard of the company's grant of free emergency calls to the public. The operator connected her with the police and a moment later she was telling her story.

I have heard a great many hard things said about the New York Police Department. No doubt many of them are true. If they are—then this case was an exception. For the police acted promptly. The girl was told to wait where she was, and in ten minutes a man entered the drug store—in plain clothes—and showed her his star.

After Agnes had told him her story, this man swore—begged her pardon—then went into the booth and did some telephoning himself. When he emerged—hot and perspiring from the close booth—he directed her:

"Now, Miss, we've got it all fixed. You go right back. Tell the missus at the house that there's a man coming to see you tonight. That'll be me—see?"

"I'll ring the bell at 9 o'clock—sharp. When you hear the ring, grab the other kids—don't bother about hats or coats or anything else—and beat it down the stairs. We'll do the rest."

PREPARED FOR RESCUE

At the word that she must go back, Agnes almost broke down, and it was half an hour's work for him to quiet and reassure her. He did it by telling her again and again how she must do it to help Mary—that otherwise, if she did not return, the people might get uneasy and all decamp before the police arrived. And so, at length, she consented to go back to the house.

She got there a little after five, and the three hours' wait for that ring at the door bell was one long torment for her. Mary was apprehensive, was wondering why they did not go out and get work. And she was homesick!

Agnes faced the task of comforting this child; but she had first of all to hide her own bitter terror and her own grief from the younger girl. How she accomplished it I cannot conceive, but they two managed to show smiling faces when the woman called them down to supper with her; and afterward they made some slight excuse to return to their room.

There they waited for the hour—and now at last Agnes told Mary what they must do. Mary had a watch. It showed twenty minutes of eight. For ten minutes they sat in each other's arms—trembling at every sound.

THE RESCUE

Their room was on the third floor. At five minutes before the hour, Agnes said—"Let's slip down one flight. Then we will be ready." Mary silently obeyed. The two girls crept down the stairs like frightened, cautious little animals, and peering over the banisters, waited.

By some miracle, no one entered the hall during the age-long five minutes' delay. Mary was crying choklingly, without tears—a nervous hysterical cry. Agnes felt her throat burning—felt her heart pound against her breast as though it would break loose and take its flight.

The Eternal Question Tomorrow

A Mother Never Runs Out of Work or Patience, Though the Supply of the Latter Sometimes Gets Low

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Daysey Maymeand Her Folks

THE cold gray dawn of the morning after has nothing in the way of chilliness and gravity of color on the week following Christmas. There is something almost funereal in the manner in which the Christmas tree in the parlor droops; the be-ruffled and be-ribboned gifts from friends still on display bear a look that is almost sinister, and the resemblance between the sound of the toys breaking under every footstep on the floor and the explosions of wrath from Father is terrifying.

The atmosphere is charged with the feeling that they have become the kindling wood which is to burn up both his patience and his money. And every woman knows what that means.

Daysey Mayme Appleton was so depressed when she looked over what she had made on the Christmas trade that she regretted she had not become a "spug," one of that noble band of brave women who compose the society for the Prevention of Useless Giving.

She wearily counted ten pearl-handled pens, five manicure sets, seven vanity bags, four corset holders, eleven hatpin receivers, nine fancy work bags, seven napkin rings and so many aprons that if she stayed home every day for thirty years and wore three at a time she never could wear them out.

Suddenly a happy thought struck her. she would become a spug! It was not too late; she would be a spug next year; not one of those who do not give—that is not in accord with the real Christian spirit. She would give, but she would give what she had received!

"I have called the society which I am organizing the Society for the Passing on of Useful Gifts. S-P-U-G, and every woman is eligible. There are no dues, and the only requisite to membership is a good memory. It would never do to pass back to Aunt Jane, for instance, the shoe bag she has passed on to me. Such mistakes have an embarrassing effect on kin reunions and cause a slump in the Family Tie."

Then she carefully tied to each gift the card that came with it, bearing Merry Xmas Greetings, Undying Love, Fond Remembrances, Best Wishes, etc.; wrapped each gift in tissue paper and put it away, to be brought forth next year, when there would be a new card attached and it would be sent on its blithesome holiday journey.

If there are any among you who have received more hatpin holders than you have hairs; whose Christmas tree held so many bags it looked as if it had been attacked by the bagworm, and who got as many bed slippers as if you were a centipede and suffered with cold feet, join the New Order of Spugs, a Society for the Passing on of Useless Gifts!

Up-to-Date Jokes

A gentleman who had the misfortune to lose his nose in a shooting accident had occasion daily, on his way to business in Dublin, to pass an old beggarwoman, who invariably saluted him with the good-natured, but, to him, incomprehensible prayer, "Hiven preserve your honor's eyesight."

The gentleman, after vainly endeavoring to suggest to himself a satisfactory explanation of the curious wish, one day put it to the old woman.

"Why do you desire my eyesight preserved? There is nothing the matter with it."

"Well, your honor," replied the old beggarwoman, "it will be a bad thing for you if ever your eyesight gets weak, for ye'll have nothing to rest your spectacles on."

While traveling on a steamboat, a notorious card-sharper, who wished to get into the good graces of a clergyman who was on board, said to the reverend gentleman:

"I should very much like to hear one of your sermons, sir."

"Well," replied the clergyman, "you could have heard me last Sunday if you had been where you should have been."

"Where was that then?"

"In the county jail," was the answer.

When a Fellow's in Love

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

BY NELL BRINKLEY

When a fellow's in love he lies awake in the small pale hours. He takes to walking the country-side under moon and starlight and making verses on Spring and things. He watches the dawn come—which the old sleepy-head never did before. The light of her eyes is the paling stars. In her hair and bosom the planets are caught. The shell-pink that grows in the East is the soft illusion of her gown. The sun is the glory of all her golden beauty. Her smile is the first blinding ray that lights the world and glows on his adoring, lonely, watching figure. "Lonely" it is, sure, for when a chap is in love he's all alone in the world—the world isn't any bigger than room to stretch in—and the sun is the splendid face of the girl he loves. Let me whisper this in your ear—she may be a plain little brown bird—just a mud-colored little person; but if the light of the world lies in her eyes for some one—if the gem of his love decks her plain little breast—why, then she's the rising sun in the East sure enough!

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

NOV. 14.—I did what I said I would do, Diary; I called my nurse into the library this morning and scolded her. What right had she, I asked, to try to look her prettiest whenever she went out with me, and make every man she met fall in love with her? Did she have no consideration for me? I couldn't have all the men friends I know trying to secure an introduction to her. No, I was not jealous at all. I despise a man who is jealous, but the worry if a man is good enough for her to know, and the anxiety about the outcome, were not good for me. I told her she forgot that I am a sick man, and she is my nurse, here in my house to take care of me, and keep me from being unduly annoyed, not for the purpose of making a chaperon of me.

She asked very demurely what she should do about it, and I told her she might at least—— Then I hesitated, for I was up against it. I couldn't tell her to keep that pretty red out of her cheeks, for it was natural. And I couldn't demand that she plaster her hair straight, because every curl on her head seems to have been made by the Lord combing her hair over His fingers. At least, they are natural curls, and to Him we give credit for all the good things of life.

"I can't itemize what you must do," I said gruffly; "but at least do try not to be so attractive."

She promised she would try, and if there were any laughter in her eyes I couldn't see it, for she kept her eyes cast down.

"You may go now," I ordered, wondering which predominated, my desire to hug her or to shake her.

With the same demure smile, she made me a courtesy as if I were seventy-five and she were six, and ran from the room.

VERY EMBARRASSING

"Come back," I called, when I heard her laughing in the hall. A prolonged laugh was her reply, and I started out for her. She ran through the open door, and down the steps, the pup in much wagging-of-tail excitement at her heels, and across the lawn we flew, pell-mell.

I had almost caught up with her when I was conscious that an automobile had stopped in front and someone was calling me.

It was that addle-pated man we had met down town the day we went for a lark, and who had called up last night wanting to meet my pretty companion again!

I had told him that she had gone to Europe! Diary, the manner in which every lie I tell turns and runs me down is almost fiendish.

He jumped out of the machine and came across the lawn. I turned and saw that the object of my pursuit had disappeared around the house, and I breathed a little easier.

"I thought," he said, "that she had gone to Europe."

There was nothing for me to do but tell another lie; and this one must be big enough to have some effect. I promised myself that.

"I told you a story," I said, in a shamefaced way, "but the truth is so unpleasant I don't like to tell it. This young woman is my ward, and is at times violently insane. Indeed, she is deranged most of the time, and no one has any control over her but myself. She was trying to run off when you saw us."

I turned and seeing Tompkins in the back yard, waved a signal at him that might have meant anything from "Have one on me," to "I am a Mason."

"I am telling him," I said, turning to my caller, "that she is trying to escape, and he must look out for her. If you will excuse me, I will go to the house and see what I can do."

IT WORKS

Then, with the air of a man whose sorrows are more than he can bear, I turned my steps toward the house. I heard him say something about "How tragic," "So beautiful," "poor girl," etc., but of course was too overcome with emotion to reply.

I heard him cranking his machine before I reached the steps. I had told a big lie, sure enough, and when I say the nurse startling me for her walk an hour later wearing her red coat, I was not at all sorry.

I called her back, and then gave an order for my limousine. She thought the open car would be pleasanter. I insisted on the closed car, and went along.

"If I am to be your chaperon," I grumbled, "I am going to make it easy for myself."

I chuckled every minute we were gone. To her inquiries all I would reply was that there is no feeling in the world quite as satisfying to a man as the thought that he is even with someone.

"Women," I philosophized, "are so constituted they never know the joys of revenge. A woman will go farther than a man to satisfy her wrongs, but she doesn't enjoy herself afterward. She has a conscience that wipes out the satisfaction. Now a man never has any after-emotions except of pure delight."

She looked so puzzled I tried to explain. "Now, for instance, if you got even with me for any wrong I had done you would feel so sorry about it afterward you would come and cry your repentance on my shoulder. On the whole," reflectively, "I am glad you are as you are. To have you crying on my shoulder wouldn't be at all bad. But on the contrary, when I get even with you I have no remorse."

Then I chuckled some more. It was a good joke, sure enough, to send one of her admirers away with the story that she is insane. It is such a good joke it is a pity I can't tell it to her.

He—You know if women get the vote, they would have to serve on juries.

She—Well, suppose we did. I guess it wouldn't take us as long to disagree as some of the men.

No Harm Done

Mother—Mary, how dare you play the piano with those dirty hands?

Mary (sobbing)—Mother, I was only playing on the black keys.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young man two years my senior. We have always been the best of friends and are yet, but when ever, or whatever, we are speaking about, he will always mention, or say something nice about a young girl with whom he used to associate. Whether he wants to see if I am jealous or not, I do not know. Should I continue paying all my attentions to him, as he says he cares for me better than any other girl he knows?

ANXIOUS.

A MAN who entertains a girl exfolling the virtues of some other girl will make a very uncomfortable husband.

You must cure him of the habit by dropping compliments for some former lover of yours. Don't let him monopolize all your time. Make him see that you are yet to be won, and don't care very much if he is the winner, or some other man.

I AM AFRAID NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a dear friend who says he cares a great deal for me but often forgets to come to see me when he is interested in his work. He says his profession comes first, and love second. Do you think I could be happy or satisfied as his wife?

ELIZABETH.

BUSINESS has a way of coming first after marriage. It is the mark of a love not very deep when it comes first during the courtship. I am afraid that with such a man—if you demand love like other women—you will find your rival too formidable for you.

MAINTAIN YOUR PRESENT ATTITUDE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a young man about two years my senior. Although we work at the same place we do not speak. If we want to see him he always follows me, but I never return it. How can I win his love without speaking to him first or through flirting?

LOVELORN.

YOU are behaving so sensibly that I would not have you change your conduct for a moment. I am sure that your modesty and refusal to flirt will win him sooner than bolder conduct.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THERE ain't no use talking," the lady said the Manicure Lady. I was getting too stout. I might just as well own up to it. I was taking a stand at myself in a mirror this morning, and I looked like the front of the local freight. There ain't no class to a fat person, change as far as looks is discerned, and the next thing for me to do is to reduce. There is a lot of ways to reduce, and I don't make up my mind which was to reduce."

"You might try to read more the way fighters does," says the Head Barber.

"You strenuous!" declared the Manicure Lady. "And besides, there ain't no hills to climb in the city, and besides, I ain't got the time. I guess I will try rolling around on the floor."

"The hoss might kick," said the Head Barber.

"I don't mean down here, you simp," snapped the Manicure Lady. "I was reading the other night how a fat star in a musical comedy lost fifteen pounds by all she done was to roll around on the floor in her room for about half an hour just before retiring. So for that."

"You would knock down all the furniture in your room and wear out the carpet, and besides, I shouldn't think a significant dame like you would want to make yourself look ridiculous. Put on a heavy suit and some heavy shoes and walk hard for an hour before breakfast every morning. I bet it will make you feel fine and make you lose weight, too."

"Wilfred was getting a little fat a few months ago and he tried walking a hour before breakfast," said the Manicure Lady. "The only trouble with his system was that he picked out a time of month along past all of them boat races, and like all them pests, Wilfred is sure fond of his brew. He would walk half a block and then into the swinging doors and out again, coming his mouth, and on another half block and another salami right. At the end of two weeks he had gained ten pounds and was beginning to look like a kettle, because he sure got no height to carry his weight. So he stopped his morning exercise and found another way to reduce. He took a oath that he wouldn't eat any meals except when he got a check for some of his poetry from the magazines. He got two checks in two months, and they was dinky checks, too. He lost all his weight mighty quick with that system. Now he eats when he feels like it. I guess I'm going to find out also the best way to get off one's superfluous flesh, after all."

Away from the city's strife,
Beyond the reach of turmoil and pain,
Come by an open road
There, where the grass is always green,
Where skies are blue,
Let us seek for the place where life is young.
Where happiness waits to see.

Over the mountains, dear,
Away from the city's strife,
Hark, listen, we're free of the yoke right here,
They'd grieve if we chanced to go.
And sometimes the sunshine is long in coming,
And skies are kind and true.
Why wander from home? For here lays peace,
And happiness waits to woo.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were lower today in New York and irregular in Boston. But recessions were small as a rule. Trading was not as active up to afternoon as it was yesterday in the local market. In New York there were mildly lower losses included Canadian Pacific ½, Union Pacific ⅝, Lehigh Valley ⅝, New Haven ⅝, American Telephone ⅝, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ⅝, and American Smelting ⅛. Gains included Southern Pacific ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Reading ¼ and American Can ⅝. Baltimore & Ohio was up ⅛.

In Boston among gains were Boston & Maine 1, Boston Elevated ½, United Fruit ½ and Shoe ⅛. Among declines were New York ⅛, American Telephone ⅛, Butte & Superior ⅛, Calumet & Arizona ⅛ and three by ¼.

IRREGULAR AT OPENING.

Irregularity prevailed at the opening of the New York market, foreign influence being heartish and exchange weaker in London, which also closed lower than at the usual pressure upon Baltimore which had been noticeable. The fact is true the further rise of speculative interest on the side when traders became said to be covering shorts, and lower, some touching ¼. Business in this stock during the first hour totaled more than 2,000 shares, while the first on the morning it was not much more.

Leaks had spread the rumor that its dividend rate was in danger of reduction, but no official word came. But this was denied by both Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific interests, it is said, and it is believed more than as per cent, on common, so far during the present fiscal year. It is to be noted that the price of the stock is due simply to the prospective reduction of the dividend rate. Like most railroads its recent earnings have depressed considerably. The showing for November, for one was about $1,131,000. The roads directors meet for dividend action tomorrow.

UNION FAITH RUMORS.

The Union Pacific management is said to be not at all concerned over stories that there will be a slump on the part of preferred stockholders for a slice of the Union Pacific cash payment and the Baltimore & Ohio stock to be distributed to holders of the common, or that there will be any opposition of moment from conservative holders.

In trading circles the U. P. "melon" was the chief topic of talk, ten opinions were varied. Fears were that if the Union Pacific's annual dividend be cut 8 per cent. it will mean a like reduction by other Western roads. Bulls were of the opinion that such a constructive action would tend to price stability.

Sentiment appeared rather bullish on the whole despite the fact that leaders ruled lower all the morning and over midday. The best news which followed the announcement from London of Brazilian bank failures was that the effectual the stability of stocks not overtaxing absorption. Selling in New York Central was based upon the theory that Union Pacific holdings in that road are to be distributed later.

READING THE LEADER.

In the volume of transactions Reading was the market leader and it advanced a fraction. There was a rumor that this company is going to distribute its holdings of Central of New Jersey. Few gave credence to the rumor story and it failed to hold

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You could buy as much ready-made for $2 or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, and partly to the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. It is a most reliable remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with one pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This saves part of the sugar, a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents in the United States. Virtually all the pine extract now in this plan has been imitated often, but never successfully. A genuine concentrated pine extract, or nearest principle, which goes with it, is the best known. Druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CALLS WORLD TO AID STARVING IN BALKANS

LONDON, Jan. 7 — Miss K. Mc-Queen, secretary of the Macedonian Relief Committee, who has just returned from a journey into the interior of the Balkans, told the AMERICAN correspondent today:

"The great problem is now many of these tens of thousands of starving people are to be kept alive until spring comes. The answer is with humanity at large.

"Let us forget all about the outrages and atrocities for the time being. Think of the people are dying; we must help them.

"Last Winter I organized relief camps in all parts of the country. We provided soup kitchens, distributed seeds and potatoes, and in other ways enabled many to tide over the crisis. In Monastir alone we dealt with 10,000 refugees from thirteen villages burnt by Turks, but the distress then was small compared with what it is now. Many people who were then well-to-do are now reduced to beggary, and are unable to raise a little something on their farms this year as an institute.

"Macedonian many villages taken by the Bulgarians last spring were destroyed by the Servians with the result that scarcely a vestige remains of the churches everywhere are burnt to the ground. The people who are ragged and starving, are without food, and for their dead. Destitution now is five times worse than it was a year ago, and funds are infinitely smaller.

"If it were only possible to make people realize the fact that not only women and children are dying daily from cold, if they could realize that the distress is becoming incredible, that I am sure the whole world would contribute cheerfully to relieve the awful state of affairs."

NEARLY 40,000 ARE HOMELESS IN SERVIA ALONE, SAYS SECRETARY

PARIS, Jan. 7.—"The reports of the direful conditions of misery and want existing among the people in the regions devastated by the Balkan war are not exaggerated," said Mr. Sicilianos, first secretary of the Greek legation, today, "especially as regards the regions annexed to Bulgaria.

"I am glad to say we have been able to relieve the distress among our own annexed population, although more could be done if we are doing.

"American generosity has been manifested in behalf in Epirus where, through the agency of the missionaries, much relief was administered some months ago.

"The great bulk of the people of Bulgarian blood who are in my province in the new Servian territory, where the annexed population numbers 2,000,000, a majority of whom are homeless."

Open Regional Bank Hearing Here Friday

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JANUARY 7, 1914.

Thomas J. Kenny's Employer Made Him the Trustee of His Property and the Guardian of His Children—Let Us Trust Him as Much

The citizens of Boston ought to know all about their candidates for Mayor. It is the greatest office in the greatest city in New England. IT IS AN OFFICE OF DIGNITY AND POWER.

It demands character, integrity and ability in him who would fill it. The best spoken promises may be broken. But the unspoken promise of a man of high character and integrity is never broken.

We must search out a candidate's character, not when he is posing during a political campaign, but when he is acting according to his natural self every day in the year.

The very interesting chapter of Mr. Kenny's career, which the AMERICAN is about to relate, has never been publicly told because Mr. Kenny has himself never told it, and the facts had to be gathered from others.

It is now well known that Mr. Kenny was born in South Boston, where he still lives, the son of a workingman; that he left school as a young boy to help out at home; that he began as an office boy at three dollars a week, and that today he is at the head of this firm. These facts have now been told by friends of Mr. Kenny, who had grown tired of hearing the fake stories which were being circulated that Mr. Kenny was a snob, cold and unapproachable.

BUT IT IS NOT KNOWN THAT MR. KENNY'S FORMER EMPLOYER MADE HIM THE TRUSTEE OF HIS PROPERTY AND THE GUARDIAN OF HIS CHILDREN.

This successful lawyer had watched young Kenny grow to manhood in his office; had seen him advance step by step from office boy to clerk, to junior lawyer, to partner; had observed him during most of his working hours nearly every day in the year for years; had seen him perform all the thousands of tasks of a large business.

Such a man knew the innermost recesses of Mr. Kenny's heart, knew his ability and honor. Knowing him, this old-fashioned New England Yankee lawyer gave to this son of an immigrant workingman THE CONTROL OF HIS PROPERTY AND THE GUARDIANSHIP OF HIS CHILDREN.

This is some evidence, fellow citizens, that Thomas J. Kenny is worthy to be trusted with your affairs at City Hall. This is some evidence that Thomas J. Kenny is a "good fellow" in the best sense of the term. He IS a "good fellow" in the sense that will make him a good mayor.

Mr. Kenny is a good man and a free man. The stories that he is controlled by any corporation are as slanderous as the stories that he was unfriendly to the working men in tne city employ! When did the AMERICAN ever support a corporation candidate? NEVER! But it is a favorite trick for audacious men in politics to shout "stop thief" in order to divert attention from their own guilt.

The AMERICAN wants Mr. Kenny to be elected because the AMERICAN wants Boston to prosper. This newspaper is one of Boston's institutions, its prosperity and influence rise and fall with the prosperity and dignity of Boston.

In a thousand unseen ways a poor mayor harms the reputation and prosperity of a great city. If we publish to the world that we have lowered our standards for our mayors we shall all suffer a direct personal loss.

The mayor is THE head of the greatest corporation in New England. Boston is larger than the steel corporation. The stockholders of the steel corporation consider that their chief officer is worth a MILLION A YEAR and they pay him that enormous sum.

Shall we, the stockholders of the city of Boston, put at the head of our great municipal corporation a man whose chief claim to favor is as a dealer in jobs. Somebody loses a job whenever anybody gets one. These job-getting statesmen never make MORE jobs, never make MORE work for more men, but only work somebody out, to get somebody else in. REMEMBER THIS.

Mr. Kenny votes for constructive work which gives MORE work; he votes to give the workingmen more pay. He has succeeded in business himself. He is not dependent upon politics for a living. He sizes up to the office.

Go-to-Church Day Will Mark Era in New England's History

When We Do Not Lose Our Ideals Entirely, We Are Likely to Become Careless of Them

The Go-to-Church movement started by the clergy of Boston is becoming a living influence. It is growing day by day, and it has become greater than local, for it is spreading all over New England.

The Go-to-Church movement is just a little counter force to the abstraction and selfishness and rush of a great city.

In a big city, when we do not lose our ideals entirely, we are likely to become careless of them.

Going to church one day may not save a man from the abyss of selfishness into which intense devotion to money making might tend to plunge him, but it is going to do him a good deal of good. It is going to keep fluid those impulses which in many cases have been steadily freezing since young manhood and make him think of other things than his own progress and to restore to him some of the great memories of childhood.

There are many who think that February 8 will be Boston's and New England's greatest day. It ought to be, and besides being New England's greatest day it ought to mark the beginning of an era in New England's history.

If the initial difficulty of getting a business man to go to church is accomplished it ought to be very much easier to keep him in the habit.

The Prevention of Cruelty to English

By REV. C. F. AKED, LL. D.

BUT is it cruelty?

Professor Justrow of the University of Wisconsin feels that we are drawing near the time when we shall have to call into existence a society for the Prevention of Cruelty to the English Language. It is being so maltreated, macerated, mutilated, that friends from near and far need to rally to its defence.

Small fines will not avail. Heavy penalties must be enacted from all those who, lending aid and comfort to slang phrases, the enemies of pure speech, are guilty of cruelty to the English tongue.

But is it cruelty?

And is it permitted to a person who does not habitually speak American, who is content with his native English, and has spent some considerable part of his life in the study of it, to enter a plea in mitigation of judgement? He brings to his task this poor qualification, that during the years of his residence in this country he has been frequently called upon to translate into English weird American phrases brought to his home by one who admires without sufficiently understanding them.

The element of the picturesque has appealed to him. And while he remains constitutionally incapable of abandoning the speech of Milton for that of George Ade, he recognizes that the historian will one day be grateful for the history hidden away in wonderful words. The commonest phrases seem to him red-veined with the life of our world.

* * *

It is certainly curious to find how the exploits of thieves have supplied the vivid metaphor "to get away with it." The train robber or highwayman or burgler is in the picture. He is exposed to danger and attack. His enemies are upon him. But he has the booty, and he "gets away with it." And so in daily life the individual who, in the teeth of opposition or more than ordinary difficulty, when failure would be easy, achieves a success, is said to "get away with it." It is a living phrase.

Equally obvious is the companion picture, "Caught with the goods." A corrupt politician exposed by his rascally master denounced—it may be loftier to say that he stands "Pilloried on infamy's stage. To bear the pelting scorn of half an age;"

but the man in the street has said it all when he remarks that "he was caught with the goods."

* * *

Business supplies the phrase, similar in sound, but not in sense, "to deliver the goods." A manufacturer or tradesman who can deliver the goods he undertakes to deliver is to this extent a successful man. No more is demanded of the writer, the preacher, the statesman, the world-ruler of mankind. Can he do what he undertakes to do? Can he make good his pretensions and professions? Can he do the very thing that he exists to do? It is all there in the tradesman's sentence: He delivers the goods.

Cards—is it poker? Here the present writer advances with halting step—some game of cards must be held responsible for the phrase which describes the reverse quality of this achievement. The man who cannot "deliver the goods," but who prates incessantly of his prowess, is a "four-flusher." The new Standard Dictionary defines him as one "whose ability and performances are inferior to his pretensions."

In-Shoots

There is always room at the top of some heads.

Post-mortem praise has never made any heart glad.

It is difficult to render soulful music with a calliope voice.

The man who admires himself is seldom able to keep the fact a secret.

To be a successful liar one must be equipped with an unfailing memory.

Platonic love never tempted a fellow to treat her to lobster salad and fizz drinks.

A good many men who appear to be weighed down with care these days have probably neglected to "take 'em off."

The woman most deserving of a good husband is the one willing to go out and work to support him—and she never gets one.

Success in many instances comes from the judicious selection of a father-in-law.

It is a bad plan to borrow either money or trouble. But if you must negotiate a loan, get the cash.

Our fighting blood often reaches the highest temperature when no enemy is in sight.

A block of preferred stock will often take the enthusiasm out of the trust buster.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XIX.

FOR some minutes after Kelley Delaine went out Caryl sat motionless, just where he had left her. She felt a strong inclination to cry. She resented his interference in her plans, yet in the bottom of her heart she appreciated that he had right on his side. But why need there always be something to mar her enjoyment, just when she might be so happy In anticipation of the first bit of pleasure she had in Boston? Delaine had to remind her what her sister would say. What did he know about her sister anway? Absolutely nothing! He had seen her once and then only for a moment, so how did he know what kind of a girl she was? And even if he did know, what business was it of his where his stenographer went or what she did? Suddenly her vanity suggested a solution to her question. He was jealous of Somerdyke. That was it.

He was angry and resentful because his friend had gotten ahead of him in asking the girl out to luncheon. At this thought Caryl's spirits rose, the smile returned to her lips and the light to her eyes. She glanced at the clock and saw that it still lacked an hour of the time that she was to meet Somerdyke. She might begin to transcribe some of the dictation that she had taken down in shorthand. She glanced over her notes and tried to read the first sentence of Delaine's story. She found it hard work, and was disturbed because it took her almost five minutes to decipher twenty-five words.

How would she ever get along if it was so difficult to read her own characters? Still she comforted herself with the thought that practice would perfect her in this line. Besides she was so nervous now that she could not concentrate her thoughts. Kelley Delaine had—she mused with vexation—made matters hard for her by his assumption of authority. A jealous man was so unreasonable. Then she smiled again and decided that, as so much of the morning was gone, it would be foolish to fuss over her work any longer. If she hurried she might be able to go home and put on her best dress before 12 o'clock. She did not pause to reflect that if Somerdyke noticed the change in her costume he would attribute it to a desire on her part to impress him. She was too eager to be cautious or to feel a proper sense of pride.

Donning her hat and jacket she hastened from her apartment, leaving her notes behind her on the typewriter table. When she reached the street she ran for a passing car and transferred from that to a line that went near her home. The weather had changed since yesterday, the atmosphere was warm and muggy and the humidity intense. In her room Caryl tore off her shirt waist and serge skirt and felt the perspiration course down her face. Without waiting to pick up her clothing from the floor where she had dropped it she put on her light Summer silk and her best hat, washed her hands at the sink in the hall, fastened a veil with large dots over her face and drew on her only pair of light silk gloves. Looking in the mirror she noted that the veil was already damp and clung to her cheeks. The sight annoyed her and tears sprang to her eyes.

"Oh, it's hateful to be poor" she muttered. "If I was rich I would have a maid to help me dress and I would not have to slave and get all my fun on the sly. I hate this life, and if ever I get a chance to get out of it, I'll do it! I don't care what Julia and that prig of a man say to the contrary! It's none of their business!"

On her way to the front door she met her landlady who started with surprise. "Why, good morning, Miss Caryl!" she exclaimed. "I thought you was workin'. I hope nothing's happened?"

"What should have happened?" asked Caryl somewhat tartly.

"I only meant," explained the kind-hearted Irish woman, "that seein' you here at noon when you don't generally get back till late afternoon made me wonder if anything was wrong. But,"—with a glance at the girl's costume—"I see from your dress that it's pleasure, not sickness, that's brought you home."

"Yes," said Caryl awkwardly. "A friend and I are going to lunch."

The woman looked at her with an anxious expression. "That's nice," she said dubiously. "Well, take good care of yourself, won't you, dearie?"

"Of course I will!" retorted Caryl testily. "What harm could come of a nice girl and myself lunching together?"

In her eagerness to be gone Caryl Marvin brushed almost roughly past Mrs. Halloran, who looked after her, the expression of anxiety increased rather than lessened by the girl's flippant speech.

To Be Continued.

Evelyn Thaw's Own Story of the Repudiation of Her Baby by Harry Thaw—and Some Other Things

Evelyn Thaw will tell the real secret of the repudiation of her baby by Harry and the rest of the Thaw family in another one of her intimate confessions in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN. She will tell, too, why she was forced to return to the stage.

These revelations by Evelyn Thaw—forming a complete life story of the principal figure in the absorbing Thaw case—are being published exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN, and throw many new sidelights on the real story of the Thaws.

Some of the other remarkable features in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN will be:

The Real Secret Behind the "Poison Needle" Cases:

Professor Rice of Columbia University explains why there have been no real "poison needle" assaults and reveals a curious scientific reason for so many women imagining that they have been attacked in this way.

Science Explains Why Your Hair Is Falling Out:

How the unsanitary customs of barbers and hairdressers spread the germs which make our heads bald and cause other troubles which until now we have never suspected.

What Is the Best Song to Put Baby to Sleep?

Science discovers that a child's brain shows just what lullabies will have the most soothing effect on him.

Teach the Children to Save Their Teeth:

Facts every parent should know about the care which must be given to the mouths of babies and young children if they are to have good health.

Newest Exploits of the Flying Men:

Illuminated airships that trace fiery pictures on the sky, the "Loop-the-Loop," the "Sideways-Roll," the "Upside-Down Flying," and other gravity and death-defying feats which aviators are now successfully attempting.

Should We Throw Our Umbrellas Away?

Many physicians take the ground that umbrellas do more to cause disease than to prevent it. Here are the reasons they give for recommending some more sanitary form of protection against the elements.

How to Get the Best Out of Your Own Self:

Doctor William Lee Howard's inspiring article in which he shows why your body is like an engine, and how only proper care can keep it from the human scrap heap, makes the best of New Year's sermons.

The Search for Relics of St. Peter and St. Paul:

How it is hoped that an exploration of the vaults of St. Clement's, the most ancient church in Rome, may bring to light many remarkable mementoes of these two apostles.

"The Dresses I Wear Myself"—By Lady Duff-Gordon:

The famous "Lucile" of London, foremost creator of fashions in the world, presents photographs and descriptions of the costumes which she herself wears.

A Guess at Life's Meaning

By EDWIN MARKHAM

IN "Time and Change," a volume written by John Burroughs, I find many passages appropriate to the meditations forced upon us by the New Year. I do not agree with the idea that the other planets circling around our sun are uninhabited or dead planets. We may not agree with all the speculations of the distinguished John Burroughs, still we must admit that they are all highly interesting. Note this brief extract from his volume:

"Surely the ways of the Eternal are not as our ways. Our standards of prudence, of economy, of usefulness, of waste, of delay, of failure—how far off they seem from the scale upon which the universe is managed or deports itself! If the earth should be blown to pieces today, and all life instantly blotted out, would it not be just like what we know of the cosmic prodigality and indifference? Such appalling disregard of all human motives and ends bewilders us.

"Of all the planets of our system probably only two or three are in a condition to sustain life. Mercury, the youngest of them all, is doubtless a dead world, with absolute zero on one side and a furnace temperature on the other. But what matters it? Whose loss or gain is it? Life seems only an incident in the universe, evidently not an end. It appears or it does not appear, and who shall say yea or nay?

"The asteroids at one time no doubt formed a planet between Mars and Jupiter. Some force which no adjective can describe or qualify blew it into fragments, and there in its stead is this swarm of huge rocks making their useless rounds in the light of the sun forever and ever.

"What matters it to the prodigal All? Bodies larger than our sun collide in the depths of space before our eyes, with results so terrific that words cannot even hint them. The last of these collisions—of this 'wreck of matter and crush of worlds'—reported itself to our planet in February, 1901, when a star of the twelfth magnitude suddenly blazed out as a star of the first magnitude and then slowly faded.

"It was the grand finale of the independent existence of two enormous celestial bodies.

"It is all one to the Eternal. Flood, fire, wind, gravity, are for us or against us indifferently. And yet the earth is here, garlanded with the seasons and riding in the celestial currents like a ship in calm Summer seas, and man is here with all things under his feet. All is well in our corner of the universe.

"During the little segment of time that man has been upon the earth, only one great calamity that might be called cosmic has befallen it. The ice-age of one or two hundred thousand years was such a calamity. But man survived it. The Spring came again, and life, the traveler, picked itself up and made a new start. But if he had not survived it, if nothing had survived it, the great procession would have gone on just the same."

Letters from American Readers

WOULD ABOLISH NOMINATION BY SIGNATURES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The nominating by signatures as that in vogue in Boston should be abolished. I have found it to be a nefarious system, fainted with suspicion and fraud. And to ask any self-respecting man to enter into such is to ask him to be subjected to indiscretions.

Surely if honor is worth anything, then it is worth getting in some different way than by signatures that do not bear the true stamp of decency in politics.

It is a loose method that is open to many discrepancies. It should be abolished.

MAX HENRY NEWMAN.

A PLEA FOR CARTOONISTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Now is the time of the year for us to remember all those who have done us good.

And yet there is one set of men who do an immeasurable amount of good likely to be forgotten.

I refer to the comic artists on your paper, who have kept us laughing from one end of the year to the other.

May their minds be kept as free from care at all times as ours are while we enjoy their clever creations.

Here's to Ted, McNamara, Sterret and all the rest for a brilliant 1914! May their powers never grow less.
